BRITISH PUSH 18 MILES BEYOND BRUSSELS TO CAPTURE LOUVAIN

point somewhere on the northeast frontier of Luxembourg.

Welcome From Luxembourg.

Premier Pierre Dupont of Luxembourg said in a broadcast today that Allied troops "have arrived at last" on the soil of the Duchy and told his people to get out flags and don their best garb to greet them.

He did not specify at what point the entry was made, but addressed this message to the field armies: "Welcome to you on Luxembourg soil and thank you a thousand times for everything you have done for Luxembourg. With your blood you are liberating our country from harm. Three days and months we were longing for you were faithfully long. Today you have arrived at last."

In Belgium there was no official news of any American push closer to Aachen than the area of Charleroi, 75 miles to the southwest. A mop-up was in progress around Beaumont and Florennes, 15 miles south of Charleroi.

Free Belgian broadcasts, however, were recorded from Namur, 15 miles northeast of Charleroi, and from the Belgian fortress city of Liege, 25 miles from Aachen, suggesting that the Nazis might have cleared out or been driven out of those cities.

Antwerp Port Being Cleared.

Supreme headquarters announced the port of Antwerp was being cleared rapidly. Antwerp, second city of Belgium, has a population of 273,317.

Encountering virtually no opposition, the British pushed 18 miles north of the Belgian capital of Brussels and took Louvain (Louvain), one of the strong points of the old Belgian defensive triangle of Liege-Leuven-Namur. Louvain was burned by the Germans in 1914 and was the easternmost point in the British defensive line in 1940.

British troops also spread out to the west taking Aalst (Alost), halfway to Gent, Mechelen, 15 miles north of Brussels, also was captured. To the southwest, other British units were occupying the French industrial city of Lille.

Thirty-five Miles a Day.

Trapped German forces ranging from a few hundred to a few thousand were being mopped up by the British in the vicinity of Tournai, where Lt. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's army first struck into Belgium in a northward sweep from its Seine bridgehead which averaged 35 miles a day for six days.

The state of some of the defeated Nazi divisions which had fled a few days ago across the now sealed escape gap through Belgium was revealed by captured enemy documents. These showed that one German division was reduced to three officers and 140 men and another to 800 officers and men from normal strength of 8000 to 10,000.

These perhaps are extreme examples of the depletion of the German forces, but it has been suggested that estimates of 100,000 Nazis cornered in the Pas de Calais coastal trap likely was too high.

The Germans at least had enough strength left in the coastal strip, however, to bring the British-Canadian close-in for the battle of the channel ports to a temporary check in an arc some 70 miles long and 30 miles deep at its widest point.

The last link in the trap encircling the Germans between the Somme and the Scheldt rivers was forged by the British capture of Antwerp. The last rail lines from the Belgian and French channel coasts to Germany were cut when that city fell. Antwerp's capture, which came after the British had taken Brussels, also gave the Allies a big ocean port to handle the flood of supplies needed to keep the offensive rolling.

The British reported no new gains beyond Aire on the road to Calais. Aire was taken more than 24 hours ago. The Canadians who had been speeding up the coast fought their way through tough resistance up to the Canche River line some 20 miles north of Abbeville and reached Etaples, 13 miles south of Boulogne.

A London broadcast said Canadian advance troops were about three miles from Boulogne.

Overrunning Robot Sites.

"We are overrunning more and more of the flying robot sites, and one correspondent says the total number now in our hands must be getting into three figures," continued the broadcast.

"The Germans are fighting rear-guard actions, but correspondents say they are not delaying our advance. It is believed that the elements of three German divisions remain in the Pas de Calais, and that they will fight hard for Boulogne, Calais and Dunkerque. If they do try to get away, they will have no clear run into Germany at any point and they will have to

ALLIES 50 MILES ABOVE LYON, ONE FORCE PUSHING EAST

U. S., French Columns Pass Macon, Drive on North Along Saone in Pursuit of Germans.

By GEORGE BRIA

ROME, Sept. 5 (AP).—French and American troops driving northward up the Saone valley in pursuit of German forces with gains of as much as 18 miles today.

Sweeping past Macon, a wine center 38 airline miles north of captured Lyon, French forces reached the vicinity of the village of Le Vignas, on the west bank of the Saone River near Tournus, by mid-afternoon. Tournus is a road center 20 miles north of Macon.

American forces also advanced east of Macon on the east side of the Saone.

The exact geographical position of the Allied forces was not stated, but the reported movements would put them about 50 airline miles north of Lyon.

Prisoner Total Exceeds 65,000.

A new batch of 2400 prisoners taken by the French in their capture of Villefranche, northwest of Lyon, increased the total since the landings on the Mediterranean beachheads to more than 65,000.

The French also reached Saint Bonnet de Bruyeres, west of Macon, while east of Macon American forces passed through Montreuil.

(A dispatch from the Swiss frontier said American troops were reported today to have occupied Pontarlier, about 110 airline miles northeast of Lyon on the western border of Switzerland, and were said to be driving toward the Belfort Gap, one of the entrances leading to southwest Germany.)

There was no serious opposition at Montreuil, in contrast to the previous day, when the Germans launched a tank-supported counter-attack to screen the retreat of the main enemy force northward on Highway 6 toward Chalons and Dijon.

fight their way through our troops."

The German garrison at Le Havre rejected an ultimatum to surrender and presumably was being brought under a final assault.

Dutch Premier Hails Allies.

Anet, the Dutch news agency, reported the British had struck five miles beyond the Dutch border to Breda, one of the strong points which the Germans seized in their airborne blitz of 1940, and Netherlands Premier Pieter Gerbruggen said in a broadcast to the Dutch people:

"The hour of liberation has struck. Soon the moment will come when the Queen will return to your midst to govern in justice and peace."

An indication that the secrecy of supreme headquarters was paying off as regards its effect on the Germans was seen in field dispatches from the First Army, which told of thousands of German troops trapped near Mons.

Believing there was a 15-mile gap in the American lines south of Mons, a large number of Germans attempted to cross in front of a division of the First Army, which was moving down the German front and reached the German frontier.

A German report said American tanks had driven across the German frontier and reached Aachen, two miles inside the Reich and one of the bastions of the Siegfried Line. This report also was carried by the Paris radio.

In an apparent reference to the same area, the Swiss radio said Allied troops, operating from Central Belgium, were reported to have reached the German frontier.

A report from Stockholm said tanks of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army had captured Paris, just inside Germany, and 12 miles northeast of Thionville, where the Germans previously had located American forces. These two reported penetrations into Germany were 100 miles apart.

In Vicinity of Nancy.

On the Third Army front, yesterday, the Americans were 12 miles east of Verdun at Etain and were in the vicinity of Nancy. The Third Army also threw another bridgehead across the Meuse at Chalons, 10 miles southeast of Commercy.

Motorized Infantry of Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' American First Army had seized Mons, supreme headquarters said yesterday. It also may have reached Namur, 35 miles from the frontier of Prussia.

Owners were being taken all over the rear areas in one of the biggest roundups since the Americans landed on the beaches of Normandy three months ago. Germans and Americans were battling at close quarters between Mons and Brussels.

It was announced that Third Army prisoners of war had mounted to 76,000. Enemy wounded were estimated at 64,500 and enemy dead at 19,500.

The Nazi counterattack caused some Allied losses in casualties and prisoners.

Allied patrols entered Lyon from three sides Sunday and seized an airfield east of the city of 600,000 population, but it was not until Monday that headquarters said the last German had been killed, captured or sent fleeing beyond the big silk center.

(Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German military commentator, said in a broadcast Monday that "the important stage of the big and difficult movement of disengagement is completed. It may be counted a considerable success that the enemy was unable to achieve an encirclement in the area between Lyon and Valence.")

At Montreuil the Germans still faced relentless pursuit for approximately 120 miles before they could escape through the strategic Belfort Gap near the German-Swiss frontier. They were faced with the additional threat of being headed off by other American forces driving east and southeast from Paris. One Tank column last was reported within about 95 miles of Belfort.

(A Bern dispatch said about 700 German soldiers, attempting to escape from the Allied armies, in France, had crossed the frontier in the last few days and surrendered to Swiss authorities for internment.)

7th Infantry in Action.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that the American Seventy-first Infantry Regiment, which was organized in 1798 and saw its first action against the British at Villiers' plantation in Louisiana in 1814, was participating in the pursuit of the Germans.

The regiment took part in the North African landings, the Sicilian campaign and the fighting at Anzio. It was one of the first infantry units to enter Rome.

ALLIES PROMISE JUSTICE FOR NAZIS WHO PUT 800 TO 1000 ROMANS TO DEATH

ROME, Sept. 5 (AP).—DECLARING that 800 to 1000 Romans were shot or beaten to death and that 1000 more were severely injured during the Nazi occupation of Rome, the Allied Control Commission has promised that the Germans responsible will be tried by a military court if they are ever found alive.

The commission announced yesterday that all those on the rolls of the German command headquarters in the Via Tasso would be held jointly responsible for the crimes. Three were singled out who, the commission pledged, "will be called on to defend themselves before a court if they ever are found alive and in Allied hands." They were: Obersturmbannfuhrer Herbert Kappler, known to the Roman population as "Col. Kappler of the S.S."; Obergruppenfuhrer, Karl Wolff, formerly as head of the S.S. and German police forces in Italy; and Hauptmann von Schutz, graduate of the Nazi school for saboteurs, spies and counter-espionage agents.

ingly until the big garrison surrenders.

Also well-back of the front a substantial number of the enemy was enveloped in a triangle formed by St. Quentin, Compiègne and Soissons, north of Paris. Since there are no lines in this area, some of them may succeed in getting back to Germany.

Government to Return.

The British radio said the "Belgian Government, now in London, is to return to Belgium in a few days."

The Belgian broadcasting service announced that a Belgian government mission had arrived in Brussels to carry out relief measures and to prevent mass migration of refugees which would hamper Allied military operations.

Belgian currency already has been furnished the Allies for use to cover expenses of the Allied troops in Belgium, it was said. More than 50 agents parachuted into Belgium in advance of the Allied entry.

The secret Belgian army prepared a number of landing grounds through which they received supplies, armaments and troops, and as the Allies approached sabotage was increased, including destruction of 180,000 gallons of gasoline the Germans needed badly.

LONDON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Britain's four-day respite from flying bomb attacks ended today when the Germans sent another shower of robots over London and South England shortly before day-break.

Both casualties and damage resulted, a brief announcement said.

HULL ANSWERS EDITOR CRITICS OF MURPHY, REBER

Says Military Leaders Fully Approve Appointments of Eisenhower Political Aids.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Secretary of State Hull asserted today, in a sharp reply to published criticism, that military leaders fully approve the appointment of Ambassador Robert Murphy and Samuel Reber as diplomatic advisers on the staff of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Murphy, now in Washington, is Eisenhower's political adviser on Germany. Reber is experienced in French affairs.

Both men, long-time diplomats at the time of the fall of France, were used by this government in dealing with the Vichy government prior to the break with it.

Hull said in a formal statement that the State Department had been "pounded upon unsuccessfully by two or three editors" because of their new appointments. One of the criticisms was that both were identified with old French groups now disaffected to the De Gaulle leadership. Another was that they had been selected by the State Department exclusively.

Hull appeared at his press conference today armed with his statement, in which he asserted that Murphy's appointment "met with the full approval of the President and the military authorities" and that Reber's appointment "was specifically suggested" by Gen. Eisenhower's chief of staff.

KENNEDY SAYS KENT GIVE FULL DATA TO NAZIS

Understanding between President Roosevelt and Churchill. This was described as a pledge that, if Britain entered the war, the United States would aid her.

Kennedy said Kent was simply a code clerk, and "was no intermediary between Roosevelt and Churchill."

The former Ambassador asserted that he learned of the Kent affair when the Scotland Yard man told him the story.

Kennedy said he was greatly upset when the Scotland Yard man revealed they had been "on Kent's trail for a long time."

"That opened the question of whether Kent had been giving the Germans copies of our dispatches since October, 1939," Kennedy said.

"If it was true," he added, "the Germans would have no need of a secret service in England. Kent had seen all the messages between Roosevelt and Churchill. We had two codes, one an ordinary one, and the other one which was more complicated, and which we considered unbreakable."

Kent Had Unbreakable Code.

"Kent had the unbreakable code book at his elbow."

"Churchill had given me a very frank and complete picture of England's unpreparedness, of her military and naval power and military placements, the status of her industries, and week-by-week developments, for forwarding to President Roosevelt."

"After Kent's arrest, we could only assume that the same dispatches had been sent to the Germans."

Kennedy said that Kent's friendship with a Russian girl, Anna Walkoff, led to a photographic shop, where it was found Kent had the documents copied on microfilm.

The trail was lost there, until the Italian Embassy called Kent's rooms during the search. Kennedy said that copies of 1500 documents were found in a locked strongbox in Kent's apartment.

Kennedy asserted that a "diplomatic blackout" went into effect at American embassies all over the world that night after he had called President Roosevelt by telephone and informed him of his findings.

Kennedy explained that by supplying the Germans with originals and decoded copies of dispatches, it was assumed that the Germans could easily obtain copies of any documents being transmitted back to the United States over public communications, and that therefore the Germans had all information available to the American State Department.

Kennedy said that if this country had been at war he would have recommended that Kent be brought back to this country and shot. As it was, he waived diplomatic immunity for Kent with the knowledge and approval of the American State Department.

EXILE POLES SPLIT BY SOSNKOWSKI'S WARSAW CHARGE

Special Cabinet Meeting Called After General Accuses Allies of 'Abandoning' Partisan Army.

LONDON, Sept. 5 (AP).—The Polish Government-in-Exile, facing a new crisis precipitated by Gen. Kazimierz Sosnkowski's accusation of Allied failure to relieve Warsaw, called a special cabinet meeting today. Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk conferred with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden just before the ministers met.

A spokesman said the meeting was concerned primarily with the plight of Warsaw. It was expected, however, that the cabinet would be advancing the date for the proposed reorganization of Poland's military direction and replacing Gen. Sosnkowski, the Polish commander in chief, with a civilian board. The general is in disfavor in Soviet Russia.

Eden probably was emphatic in telling Mikolajczyk of the dangers of such statements as that of Sosnkowski to British efforts to re-establish relations between Poland and Russia.

His Charge Against Allies.

It was understood that Sosnkowski made his attack without consulting the Government. He asserted that the Allies "abandoned" the patriot army of Gen. Bor during its month-long fight against the Germans in the Polish capital. The accusation was made in a message to Gen. Bor yesterday.

The London News Chronicle said Mikolajczyk threatened to resign unless his Government disavowed the statement.

Polish headquarters in London said today that patriots within Warsaw still were fighting. A spokesman attributed yesterday's report that resistance had ended to official confusion surrounding the Allied attitude "a ghastly and tragic riddle."

Referring to the effort expended by the Allies to send supplies to Polish partisans in Warsaw by plane, Sosnkowski said: "The loss of 27 planes suffered over Warsaw in one month means very little to the Allied air forces, who have at present over 10,000

Canadians 6 Miles From Rimini on Adriatic Flank in Drive for Po Against Stiffening Resistance.

ROME, Sept. 5 (AP).—Canadian troops of the Eighth Army, supported by British warships standing offshore in the Adriatic, drove last night to within six miles of Rimini but Allied headquarters reported today they were meeting increasing resistance as they edged closer to the eastern terminus of the important Po valley highway.

The Nazis reacted vigorously to the bridgehead across the Conca River, which the Canadians established after a slashing two-prong drive during the last three days. Bitter fighting raged along the ridge running south from Abbisina to Misano.

The Germans hurled heavy tanks and fresh infantry contingents against the Canadians in a determined effort to retake Misano, which they lost Sept. 3, but after a bloody fight the Canadians swept the area clear of the enemy.

When the fighting abated eight Nazi armored cars, six Mark IV tanks and three Hornets littered the battlefield along with numerous enemy dead, German forces in the battle included the Twenty-sixth Panzer division, a new unit.

British warships ran boldly in along shore and pumped more than 800 shells into enemy defense positions in support of the drive toward Rimini. A German battery returned the fire until it was silenced by warship shells.

Polish troops tightened their hold on the coastal town of Pisano, 20 miles below Rimini, inflicting serious losses on the German open rebellion intended to sabotage Mikolajczyk's conciliatory policy."

There seemed little reason to doubt that the incident would hasten a showdown between Mikolajczyk and Sosnkowski.

In his message to Bor, Sosnkowski described the help sent Polish partisans battling in Warsaw as woefully inadequate and called the Allied attitude "a ghastly and tragic riddle."

Referring to the effort expended by the Allies to send supplies to Polish partisans in Warsaw by plane, Sosnkowski said: "The loss of 27 planes suffered over Warsaw in one month means very little to the Allied air forces, who have at present over 10,000

First Parachute Division and capturing many prisoners, including a battalion commander.

Front dispatches said there were signs of German reorganization and improvement on the eastern flank of the front, with the enemy reinforced by troops brought from the sector east of Florence, where a vital battle also is in progress.

West of Florence, the American Fifth Army scored gains of almost five miles, reaching the Serchio River and the outskirts of Lucca, a provincial capital of 82,000 and a junction of six important roads.

Full occupation of Pisano in the central sector also gave the Americans possession of key terrain east of Pisa and south of Lucca.

North and east of Florence, the British made new gains despite increasing resistance, especially in heavy artillery fire.

The Mediterranean Allied Air Force sent 1800 planes—flying Fortresses, Liberators, medium bombers, light bombers and fighter-bombers—into the onslaught against communications of Northern Italy yesterday.

Few usable highways and railways remained after the attacks as supply or retreat routes for the Germans in the Gothic line. American mediums alone knocked out 16 of 18 bridges attacked.

The Brenner Pass rail line, which already is interdicted, was bombed at four points by heavy bombers to prevent Nazi engineers from restoring it. The Fortresses attacked German submarines tied up in Genoa harbor.

planes of all types at their disposal. The losses suffered by the Polish Air Force during the battle of Britain were 40 per cent, while a little over 15 per cent of the planes and crews were lost during attempts to help Warsaw."

NAZIS SAY REICH INVADERS FACE 'DEATH, HATRED'

Radio Pictures 'Invincible Home Front—We Are Fighting for Our Bare Existence.'

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 (AP).—Berlin propaganda broadcasts yesterday sought to build up a picture of an invincible home front army within the borders of the Reich.

"No German grain shall feed the enemy," said a Transocean broadcast. "No German mouth shall give him information, no German hand offer him help. He shall find every bridge destroyed, every road blocked—nothing but death, destruction and hatred will meet him; he shall bleed to death on every meter of German soil."

"We shall force this victory," said a broadcast. "The enemy is flooding us with a veritable thunderstorm of propaganda which may bring confusion and conflict in the homeland. He is out to split the nation and its unity."

"It is our job to work and to continue to work, as only that can bring us victory."

The broadcast came amid continued silence by Adolf Hitler who, Lieben had reported, planned to appeal to the German people to fight to the last ditch in defense of the "holy soil" of the Reich.

Some top-flight Nazis already were reported fleeing the country. Lisbon dispatches told of the arrival in Barcelona of a German plane, among whose passengers were men named Amman and Trefoeger. A Max Amman is a close associate of Hitler and there is a high executive named Trefoeger in an industrial combine controlled by Reichsmarshal Goering.

TRUMAN OFFERS TWO-STEP PLAN TO AVOID DEPRESSION

Tells Labor Day Thousands in Detroit, Pontiac, F. D. R. Is Common Man's Best Hope.

DETROIT, Sept. 5 (AP).—Political seers today weighed the effects of the fourth term campaign's first official visit to Michigan, made by Vice-Presidential Candidate Harry S. Truman in a Labor day round of speech-making.

The Missouri Senator, in three speeches to labor rallies, pleaded for re-election of President Roosevelt, with the arguments that he was the best hope for the "common man" and that Thomas E. Dewey, his Republican rival, was "inexperienced."

In a speech to a Detroit Cadillac Square audience of 25,000 to 30,000, and to a Pontiac group and a second Detroit rally, Senator Truman championed Roosevelt as the "greatest man" ever to occupy the White House and the representative of a "fair, square deal."

A police motorcycle escort accompanied Truman's motor cavalcade on the 30-mile Pontiac trip. A brass band met him at that city.

"The absolute salvation of this country lies in the re-election of President Roosevelt," Truman told his Pontiac listeners.

Before his talk here Truman watched a parade of CIO unionists in which, union heads said, 100,000 men and women took part. The Senator concluded his Michigan visit in a talk to an AFL-sponsored dinner.

Truman said the Democrats would strive for full peacetime use of all factories which had been built by the Government for arms production.

The Democrats, he said, promise to avoid what he termed the mistakes of the last postwar period when, he said, the Government sold war plants "at a pittance" at the insistence of "big business" trying to "strangle out all new competition."

"We shall not, for the sake of price and profit, restrict our output of the good things of life," he said. "Rather, for the sake of our people, we shall return to the 40-hour work week and increase basic wages in terms of actual purchasing power—that is, we will enable labor to buy and use an ever increasing amount of the good things of life."

Truman said postwar America could avoid the "old spiral" of depression for business and unemployment for labor "if these two steps were taken:

1. Unemployment insurance for displaced war workers while war plants are being retrofitted for peacetime production.

2. Continued operation instead of the junking of factories originally set up for production of war materials.

"You should be—and I think most of you are—confident that, given the right kind of leadership, America can win her way forward to prosperity through employment for all," Truman said.

"You are not so sure we could do it with the wrong kind of leadership. And most of you are quite certain we could not do it at all with the sort of leadership we had from 1920 to 1932—and that is what you must expect from the opposition."

Telling his audience that "we of the Democratic party are designed to the prospect of huge unemployment after the war," Truman said the United States had built the plants and facilities for increased production which can "raise our standards and bring to American labor and industry the greatest era of prosperity in our history."

"This will not be easy, for there are those who fear the competition of these new plants, and who will cry out that it is unfair for them to have to compete with them. If they have their way, these new plants will be shut down. Many of them will be sold by the Government—at a pittance. And they then will be junked."

"That is what happened to many such plants, particularly through the West, after World War I. It was not business trends that demanded such shutdowns. It was business—big business, itself—intrenched and influential, and determined to strangle out all new competition."

"Already the same old group is putting on the same pressure to protect their vested interests. And the party that has always knuckled under to monopoly, the Republican party is asking America for the chance to control our affairs."

"Your Government, as it presently is being administered, is determined that this shall not happen again."

CIO Chief Calls for Immediate Conversion Plan and Annual Wage

Murray Says Workers' Purchasing Power Must Be Increased—AFL Head Predicts Greatest Prosperity After War.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 5 (AP).—President Philip E. Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations declared in a Labor day address that "our future peace and economic welfare depend upon intelligent collaboration with other nations."

Labor, he said, looks with great hope to the outcome of such conferences as those at Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks.

Murray declared "a program for reconversion and for full production and employment after the war, must be worked out at once by government in co-operation with industry, labor, agriculture and other affected groups."

He asserted one of the first steps necessary, "if we are to have jobs for all after the war, is to increase the purchasing power of the American people." This step, he said, "is prevented at present by the so-called 'Little Steel' formula which has frozen wage rates at a level far below that of wartime living costs."

Murray urged that the "Little Steel" formula be revised, and said the principle of a guaranteed annual wage must be established throughout American industry.

Of the annual wage, he added: "There is no sound reason why industrial workers should continue to be the only substantial group in America who cannot figure their income in yearly terms, but must live from week to week, or even from day to day, without knowing if they will have any income on the morrow."

"The key to this program for full production and jobs for all is national as well as international planning," he said. "We recognize that private industry has the primary responsibility for full employment. But we cannot rely solely upon its uncontrolled profit instincts to perform this task, without risking an even worse depression than followed the last war."

Green Predicts Nation's Greatest Prosperity After War.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 5 (AP).—With labor, management and the Government co-operating, the end of the war will signal the start of the greatest period of prosperity in the nation's history, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor predicted yesterday.

He cautioned, however, that labor's "enemies at home" must be overcome and that the nation must be prepared for temporary reverses and unemployment during the transition from wartime to peacetime economy.

"The rest period will come between the time war contracts are canceled and industry is able to complete its reconversion to peace production," Green told a Labor day gathering of 20,000 workers at St. John's River Shipbuilding Co. here.

"Obviously, the national interest demands that this transitional process be completed in the shortest time possible and with least suffering to unemployed war workers and demobilized service men."

Therefore, the AFL is pressing with all its power in Washington for the approval of plans for starting reconversion now, without waiting for the end of the war.

Reviewing labor's part in the conflict, Green said American workmen have produced more than 130 billion dollars' worth of fighting equipment since July, 1940. But the working man's long hours of toil "have been rendered more onerous by hate, the criticism and the false charges which have been directed against the men and women of American labor by their enemies here at home," Green said.

Formal approval for the city to excavate the proposed major airport site at Columbia Bottoms was given by the Army Engineers in a permit received today by Milton M. Kinsey, president of the Board of Public Service.

Kinsey said the next step would be the introduction of an ordinance in the Board of Aldermen Sept. 22 to purchase a tract of land on the site, which is near the confluence of the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers.

This ordinance would be in the nature of a test, Kinsey said, to determine how much opposition there is in the board to the entire project. He declined to name the owner or state the size of the tract covered in the ordinance, which he has had drawn up ready for introduction.

IRVING J. LEE ALREADY PAID '38 STATE TAX, SUIT DROPPED

An income tax suit in which the State of Missouri sought to collect back income taxes of $2387 from Irving J. Lee, St. Louis bookmaker who lives at 7146 Kingsbury boulevard, University City, was dismissed today by Circuit Judge Amandus Brackman at Clayton. The amount was claimed as taxes due for 1938.

Assistant Attorney General William J. Becker asked that the case be dismissed because it was discovered that Lee had been assessed twice for the 1938 tax. Lee showed him a canceled check made out to the State Auditor for the 1938 tax, Becker said, in adding that State records showed Lee had paid.

FINED FOR THROWING BOTTLE

Claude B. Bond, 5590 Pershing avenue, unemployed steamfitter and medically discharged Navy Seabee, was fined $25 today by Provisional Police Judge Harry Felderbaum for throwing a pop bottle onto the playing field during yesterday's baseball game at Sportsman's Park. No one was injured.

Bond said he "became excited" and did not intend to hit any one.

60 MORE MEN IN 138TH BACK AFTER 3 YEARS

12 Others to Arrive Tomorrow, Maj. Johnson Announces.

About 60 men of the Second Battalion of the 138th Regiment, among the last to return from the Alaskan theater, are in St. Louis on furlough from Camp Shelby, Miss., and about 12 more St. Louisans will leave Camp Shelby tonight and arrive here tomorrow. Others will arrive subsequently.

Maj. Herbert T. Johnson, commander of the Second Battalion of the 138th, a former Missouri National Guard regiment, told the Post-Dispatch by telephone that the last components of the regiment, away for nearly three years, arrived at Camp Shelby on Thursday. That was three months after the arrival of the first contingent of men of the First Battalion last May.

Maj. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Johnson, 4624 Arsenal street, said that the future of the Second Battalion and of the 138th as such, awaited War Department disposition. He said the group of 60 men left Shelby Thursday night and reached St. Louis Friday.

The week end included Sgt. Orville Hanson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hanson, 639 East Frisco avenue, Webster Groves; Tech. Cpl. Carl Clay, son of Mrs. Little Clay and brother of Mrs. Robert G. Courial, 439 Farway lane, Kirkwood, and Pfc. Edward H. Peters, 4509 Clarence avenue. All had been in Alaska more than two years.

Families who expected a group of men of the 138th to arrive Sunday, as announced by the Camp Shelby public relations office, were at Union Station to meet Illinois Central trains from the South, but none of the men arrived Sunday.

Sgt. Robert Williams, son of Mrs. E. D. Williams, 46 Log Cabin lane, Webster Groves, telephoned his mother that he would arrive tomorrow. Among those at the station Sunday were families of Staff Sgt. Thomas G. McDermott of Company F, son of Mrs. and Mr. Edward McDermott, 4392 McPherson avenue; Staff Sgt. Oscar J. Laramie, Company E, son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Laramie, 405 St. Louis street, Florissant, away two years, 10 months; Pvt. Henry R. McAllister, brother of Mrs. Charles Dennis, 3848 Russell boulevard, away since June, 1941, who was married in Alaska, and Staff Sgt. Edward Pastovich, formerly of Kirkwood.

Orders increasing the amount of beef required to be set aside for the armed forces and further restricting the use of freezer space in cold storage warehouses were made public today by the War Foods Administration.

Civilian beef supplies will be affected only slightly by a requirement, effective immediately, setting aside 60 per cent, instead of the present 50 per cent, of selected beef. More cattle are being slaughtered than a year ago, but fewer packers are producing beef which meets army specifications.

Total quantities of fresh fruits and vegetables and packaged fresh fish which may be stored in any warehouse are limited to the amounts stored on Oct. 1, 1943. Storage of any product in less than 300 pounds is prohibited, and storage of fresh poultry in barrels and baskets is restricted.

MAN HIT BY PLANE PROPELLER

John L. Smallwood, 8608 Joseph avenue, Brentwood, suffered cuts on the back of the head and shoulders yesterday when he walked against the moving propeller of an airplane at Lakeside Airport, near Granite City. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital in East St. Louis, where his injuries were pronounced not serious.

Smallwood alighted from the plane, and after cleaning some grass from the landing gear was warned by the pilot, J. R. Tucker, 5629A Labadie avenue, to move away from the propeller. Instead, he stepped backward and was struck.

NEW SCHOOL YEAR OPENS IN CITY AND MOST OF COUNTY

St. Louis Public System Conducts Half-day Registration—Program Expanded.

School children in St. Louis and most of those in St. Louis County returned to their classes today following the summer vacation.

The total enrollment, taking into account late registrations, was forecast as follows:

St. Louis public schools, 91,000; St. Louis County public schools, 48,000; Catholic parochial schools, 25,000 in the city and 10,000 in the county; Lutheran schools, 3600, and Hebrew schools, 1500.

Kirkwood public and parochial schools open tomorrow and schools in Webster Groves, Clayton and Rock Hill on Monday.

All pupils in the St. Louis public schools were dismissed at noon today, an innovation introduced this year by Superintendent of Instruction Philip J. Hickey to permit teachers and principals a half-day in which to handle clerical work incident to the opening of classes. Formerly, only high schools were closed at noon the first day.

Shortage of Substitutes.

At a meeting of school principals yesterday Hickey said there was a marked shortage of substitute teachers because of wartime conditions and that on innumerable days during the fall principals might find it difficult to staff all classrooms.

He pointed out that normally the corps of substitutes is bolstered by some 200 graduates of teachers colleges awaiting permanent assignment but that this year only 50 such graduates are available.

Hickey said he thought a slight increase would be met this year in the enrollment in kindergartens and elementary schools, which would be offset by a further but perhaps somewhat arrested decline in high school enrollment.

A guidance clinic set up in the Board of Education building is attempting to persuade high school students to leave war jobs and return to school, or to combine school with part-time jobs. It will remain open at least through this week.

Physical Education.

An expanded health and physical education program will go into operation with special reference to elementary schools. Elementary pupils will be required to spend 90 minutes a week in physical education classes, rather than the 60 minutes formerly required. There also will be an increase in medical services offered by school physicians and nurses and a comprehensive program of dental examination will be set up.

In connection with the public schools' current emphasis on improvement in reading, eye examinations will be given on a broader basis and a new series of reading material from kindergarten through the sixth grade will be introduced.

One school, Cote Brilliante Branch High School, at 2616 Cote Brilliante street, near the intersection of the school and the railroad tracks, will be opened as an elementary school when it has been determined whether to use it as a school for white or Negro children.

Union Station and Bus Terminals Jammed at End of 3-Day Holiday

Crowds Rival Those of Last Fourth of July — Mostly War Workers on Brief Vacations.

St. Louisans jammed Union Station and bus terminals last night returning home and to their jobs from a long Labor day week end that started Friday night with an exodus that rivaled that of last Fourth of July.

Officers of the Greyhound Bus Lines said travel within a radius of about 150 miles of St. Louis was about 10 per cent greater than in the last peak period—the Fourth of July holiday. One spokesman said most of the travelers appeared to be war workers en route home to Southern Illinois, or Southern Missouri for a brief vacation.

Train travel was somewhat lighter than that of last July 4, a spokesman for the Terminal Railroad Association said, adding that Union Station crowds appeared normal this morning, most of the vacationers having returned last night. Crowds then, he said, were "pretty nearly peak crowds."

Capt. Thomas E. Whitecotton of the Missouri Highway Patrol reported that automobile traffic over the week end was considerably heavier than usual, with the peak reached last night when most motorists returned from vacation spots to start back to work today.

St. Louisans who stayed home visited Forest Park in large numbers and took short automobile rides, using gasoline coupons they had saved for the occasion. Approximately 15,000 attended the Sunday baseball game between the St. Louis Browns and Detroit, and about 17,000 saw the holiday game yesterday between the Browns and the Cleveland Indians.

During the three-day holiday 92 persons were arrested on charges of disturbing the peace and the two city Police Courts worked until 1 p. m. today to dispose of the cases. Thirteen of those arrested were fined, nine were paroled and the rest of the defendants were discharged or obtained continuances.

The only organized holiday celebration was a Labor day parade in East St. Louis, in which members of 60 labor unions participated. The line of march started at Eighteenth street and St. Louis avenue and ended at Jones Park, where the annual picnic was held under the auspices of the Central Trades and Labor Union.

DIES AFTER CHARGING FOR 3 OIL STATIONS

HE IS BEING POISONED FOR 3 OIL STATIONS

Henry Temme of Wentzville Told Sheriff—Stomach Contents Analyzed.

State Highway Patrol chemists at Jefferson City today were making an analysis of the contents of the stomach of Henry Temme, 85 years old, of Wentzville, Mo., who told St. Charles County Sheriff Omar Schnatmeier before he died Friday that he was being poisoned.

Temme, who was the father of Gus Temme, State Liquor Inspector for St. Charles County, called Sheriff Schnatmeier to his home early last week, Schnatmeier told a Post-Dispatch reporter.

"He told me he had been sick and was getting sicker," Schnatmeier said. "He seemed to think someone was poisoning him."

Temme was admitted at St. Joseph's Hospital in St. Charles last Wednesday. He died there Friday. Physicians said symptoms did not indicate poisoning.

Intestinal organs were removed at an autopsy at the hospital and sent to the patrol headquarters. Schnatmeier said, "just to be on the safe side." Funeral services were held for Temme Sunday in Wentzville. In addition to his son, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah B. Temme.

A suspension order was issued by Commissioner Gunn against Howard Johnston, operator of Johnston's Service Station at 2900 North Frairie avenue. OPA investigators said Johnston gave his supplier 168 counterfeit A-11 and 351 counterfeit C-2 coupons in payment of gasoline received.

Milton Grotper, operator of Grotper's Service Station at 10845 Riverview drive, was prohibited from further doing business after agents testified they discovered that he did not have ration coupons for 2928 gallons of gasoline he had sold. They pointed out the total capacity of his filling station was 3165 gallons.

Woman Struck by Room-Seeker.

Mrs. Mary Moncado, 1823 Carr street, was struck in the face and head Sunday by an unidentified Negro when she sold him and another Negro who accompanied him that she did not have any rooms to rent, she reported to police yesterday.

CANNED TOMATO CEILING SET

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Average retail price for canned tomatoes from the 1944 crop will be the same as that in 1943, the Office of Price Administration said yesterday in announcing processors' ceiling prices, effective Sept. 5.

OPA pointed out that subsidy is being paid on canned tomatoes this year to hold prices to 1943 levels for civilians. However, it determined whether to use it as a school for white or Negro children.

1-A MEN OVER 26 LIKELY TO GO IN MONTH OR TWO

Those Not in Key War Jobs to Be Called Again in Regular Sequence of Order Numbers.

St. Louis men over 26, who are classified 1-A by Selective Service and who are not in essential war work, are likely to be called for induction into the Army this month or next month, Col. John G. Christy, head of Selective Service in St. Louis, said today.

Explaining that the bar on the induction of men over 26 has been lifted by Col. Claude C. Earp, director of Selective Service in Missouri, Col. Christy said all draft boards have been notified to resume induction of men over 26 in the regular sequence of order numbers. The bar was placed on the over-26 age group to permit draft boards to reclassify and review 1-A registrants in the light of more liberal Selective Service rulings from Washington.

"Since the ban has been on," Col. Christy said, "draft boards have been meeting their induction quotas from the 18 to 25 age group. But any non-father who is now classified 1-A can almost be sure of being inducted within the next 60 days."

Col. Christy pointed out that selective service laws permit non-fathers from 26 to 29 to be deferred only if they hold key positions in war industry or other activities that are considered necessary.

Provisions for non-fathers over 30 are less stringent, he said. Men in this age group may be deferred if they are engaged in war or other essential work. Fathers in these age groups may be deferred, he said, depending upon their marital status and their occupational activities.

"In spite of all this," he added, "it must be remembered that Selective Service laws tell us to take all acceptable men from 18 to 37."

LOUIS H. EGAN VISITS PAROLE OFFICER, GETS INSTRUCTIONS

Louis H. Egan, former $80,000-a-year president of Union Electric Co. of Missouri, called today at the office of Milton Weiffenbach, chief Federal parole officer here, to learn the terms of the parole which Egan was released last Friday from the Federal prison at Terre Haute, Ind.

Egan was paroled after serving eight months of his two-year term for violating the corrupt practices section of the Holding Company Act, in connection with the company's $600,000 political slush fund.

He was instructed to report to the parole officer once a month, in person whenever possible, up to Dec. 28, 1945, the end of the term for which he was sentenced. Mrs. Egan accompanied her husband to the Federal Building.

CAA FINDS FEW PHYSICALLY UNFIT AS PLANE PILOTS

Only 1.5 Pct. of Applicants Rejected for Medical or Mental Reasons, Official Says.

Tests over the last two years have shown that many physically handicapped persons can pilot an airplane adequately, Dr. W. R. Stovall, chief of the Civil Aeronautics Administration Aviation Medical Division, said in an interview here today.

"Our division," he said, "has had to eliminate for physical or mental reasons only 1.5 per cent of those persons who apply for medical certification." Dr. Stovall is in St. Louis to attend the sixteenth annual convention of the Aero Medical Association of the United States which opened yesterday at Hotel Jefferson.

The current procedure of certifying applicants medically for private pilot's licenses will be speeded up from a matter of months to only a few days, Dr. Stovall said.

"We are now at work revising the procedure in conjunction with a research committee appointed by the National Research Council," he said.

Mental Tests Studied.

At present, he said, the problem of weeding out those mentally unfit is not being met successfully. Psychiatric measures necessary to cope with the situation cannot be applied because of present examination methods and facilities, but "the methods should be revised and the question is being considered by the new research committee."

Creation of the new research committee was discussed at sessions today by Dr. Louis B. Flexner of Washington and Brig. Gen. E. G. Reinartz of the United States Army. The committee will counsel CAA with periodic reviews of physical and mental standards as affected by changing conditions of operation and design of aircraft; investigative work pertaining to physical and mental tests and study of CAA medical records relating to airman performance and accident proneness.

"It is my opinion," said Gen. Reinartz, "that this new committee should recommend a definite program of education for the public by radio, press and such other means as may be available to indoctrinate our people in the possibilities and limitations in this tremendously expanding field. Our people must be informed that even in a democracy there are certain restrictions in connection with flying that will from time to time have to be imposed in the interest of the public generally."

How two physicians working in an environment resembling high altitudes reactivated healed tubercular spots while in quest of data regarding the chokes, an asthmatic high altitude choking, was reported in a paper by three Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons staff men.

The doctors conducting the experiments were not identified, but both have recovered. They conducted their work in steel chambers which simulated the atmospheric conditions through which high altitude flyers must travel.

They were studying the chokes, an asthmatic-like affliction suffered by flyers in altitudes of about 40,000 feet. The chokes, it was reported, are not in themselves dangerous, but they endanger the lives of combat airmen by requiring removal of oxygen masks. The chokes appeared to be attributable to bubbles of nitrogen forming in the throat membranes. They are a high altitude disturbance similar to deep-sea bends.

Blue Patches on Bodies.

The investigators also learned that persons with sensitive skins are particularly susceptible to chokes. These persons, they said, also develop blue patches on their bodies because the nitrogen bubbles in or near the skin cut off the blood circulation.

Why the scars of the previous tubercular victims reopened is not clear, the Columbia group reported. It is thought they may have burst their own internal pressure when in the experiments the pressure in the lung tissues dropped.

Persons attending the meeting were told by Malcolm Y. McCormick of the Civil Aeronautics Administration Aviation Medical Division, that mental as well as physical defects must be considered in the issuance of pilot licenses, if safety is to be assured, in civil aviation.

Parallel in Auto Licenses.

By tracing the relation of physical fitness to proficiency in the history of automobile license issuance, said McCormick, highly relevant material may come to light.

"In both cases," he said, "there are agencies functioning in the interests of the public in their operation of a potentially hazardous vehicle. In both cases it has been necessary to weigh the 'constitutional' right of the individual on the one hand against the safety of the public on the other."

But, McCormick continued, the correlation studies do not always furnish a complete picture. One problem, he said, is the failure to eliminate all deficient cases from the normal group. Citing the present limited psychiatric evaluation of aspirant pilots, McCormick declared that if there are factors "leading to accident proneness" not yet being disclosed through the current examination procedure then these factors, unless accompanied by some other evident defect, would appear among normals" to give them a relatively higher accident rate.

Use of a group-comparison method for ascertaining the relation of physical deficiency to proficiency, McCormick observed, is misleading. "In actual clinical practice," he said, "there is always the very real possibility of including as normal, such extremely bad risks as epileptics, some of the clinical psychoses and a certain percentage of alcoholics."

McCormick urged as one way to obtain more precise information about the qualifications of aspirant pilots accurate determination of the physical and mental characteristics of the pilot and the candidate for a pilot's license.

3 FLYERS MISSING IN ROMANIA NOW REPORTED SAFE IN ITALY

Three airmen from the St. Louis area who previously were reported as being missing in action, or as prisoners of war in Romania, have been evacuated to Italy, the Post-Dispatch learned today.

Cpl. Robert R. Vernon Jr., 23, gunner on a bomber, who was reported missing in action July 22 over Romania, informed his parents in a cablegram that he was safe and well in Italy. It was believed that he was among the prisoners liberated with other American flyers when the Russians captured Bucharest. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Vernon Sr., live at 203 Gray avenue, Webster Groves. His father is general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

Lt. Robert E. Lynn of 2700 Hendretta street and Lt. Guy L. Hudson, 901 Grand avenue, Edwardsville, Ill., were freed from Romanian prison camps last week and evacuated to Italy, an Associated Press dispatch reported today.

BAR COMMITTEE URGES CONTINUING POLL ON JUDGES IN PATH OF DRIVE

5 Questions Proposed for Association Ballot on Retaining Present Circuit Jurists.

The Bar Association of St. Louis, which in previous elections has passed its own judgment on qualifications of candidates for the bench, has received a recommendation from its judiciary committee that members of the bar continue their critical function this year under the new non-partisan court plan.

This year the question before the voters in November will be only whether the judges of the St. Louis Circuit Court whose terms are expiring shall be retained in office.

For a proposed poll of bar association members' views on the present Circuit Court Judges the judiciary committee has drawn up a ballot which asks five questions concerning each judge, and indicates the percentage of the vote the judge must receive in order to be recommended by the association.

The questions and the required percentages are:

"Have you complete confidence in his integrity?" Required, 85 per cent.

"Does he possess the requisite judicial temperament?" Seventy per cent.

"Does he possess the requisite legal ability?" Sixty per cent.

"Is he industrious and diligent in the dispatch of business?" Sixty per cent.

"Is he considerate of the time and convenience of all persons appearing in his court?" Fifty per cent.

In the event fewer than 250 votes are cast on any question, the vote on that particular question is not to be taken into consideration or reported. The Bar Association now has more than 1100 members.

The judiciary committee also proposes a questionnaire on political activity of judges. Its report declares on this point:

"In order to assist in the maintenance of the high standards required under the non-partisan court plan, and to give the members of this association an opportunity to present any facts or information which they might possess concerning political activity of any judge of the Circuit Court of St. Louis, this committee suggests that a questionnaire be enclosed with the ballot, giving the member an opportunity to present the facts or information in his possession to the president of the Bar Association with the understanding that such information would be treated as confidential."

The proposed questionnaire on political activity quotes a provision of the non-partisan court plan making it unlawful for any Circuit Court Judge to "directly or indirectly make any contribution to or hold any office in a political party or organization or take part in any political campaign."

It asks Bar members if they have any information indicating a violation of the provision. It then asks if the member having the information is willing to submit it in confidence to the president of the Bar Association.

Circuit Court Judges Charles E. Williams and Robert L. Aronson, whose six-year terms expire Dec. 31, would be the first of 18 Judges of the St. Louis Circuit, the Eighth, to be passed on by the bar under the proposed method. The terms of the others expire in 1946 and 1948.

The executive committee of the Bar Association has called a special meeting of the Association for 6 p. m. Monday, Sept. 18, in the ballroom of the Hotel DeSoto, at which the judiciary committee report will be read and acted upon. James V. Frank is chairman of the judiciary committee, the other members of which are William W. Crowder, Ronald J. Poulis, James E. Garstang, Samuel H. Liberman and Roland F. O'Brien.

CHIANG APPEALS FOR UNITY IN CHINA'S MOST TRYING HOUR

CHUNGKING, Sept. 5 (AP).—President Chiang Kai-shek of China in a plea for unity today declared that the present period of China's war of resistance was most difficult.

"The decisive stage of the war has begun in the China theater," the Generalissimo told the People's Political Council, an advisory board without plenary powers which the Chinese regard as an embryonic parliament.

Since defeats on Saipan and Guam, Chiang said, Japan realized its doom was near and in an attempt to bolster ebbing morale of its army and people had launched offensives in Honan and Hunan provinces. China, he declared, must be prepared for its most trying hour before final victory is attained.

DEATH SENTENCE FOR ATTACK ON WOMAN IN HOME UPHELD

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 5.—The death sentence of James Thomas, Negro, imposed by a St. Louis County Circuit Court jury for a criminal assault upon a 22-year-old white woman in January 1943, was upheld today by Division No. 2 of the Missouri Supreme Court.

The court set the execution of Thomas for Oct. 20 in the lethal gas chamber in the State penitentiary here.

Thomas was convicted of attacking the woman, mother of a four-month-old child, after forcing his way into her home in Wellston. The woman, an employee of the small arms ammunition plant, was slashed on the abdomen and one hand with a knife, robbed and assaulted.

BIG U. S. BOMBERS HIT REICH CITIES IN PATH OF DRIVE

Stuttgart, Karlsruhe and Ludwigshafen Blasted—Budapest Pounded in Support of Reds.

LONDON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Up to 1750 American planes from the west and south struck three major transport and industrial centers in the German Rhineland today in the path of advancing Allied armies and bombed Budapest and rail bridges in Hungary and Northern Italy.

Around 750 Flying Fortresses and Liberators from Britain bombed Stuttgart, Karlsruhe and Ludwigshafen. They were voyaged by about 500 Mustang fighters.

Up to 500 heavy bombers from Italy blasted Budapest, and railroad bridges 20 miles northeast at Szob and 10 miles southeast at Szolnok. The Germans threw up flak at the Hungarian capital, but risked no fighter planes. Another flight of Liberators bombed the Ferrara bridge in North Italy for the sixth time in two weeks.

Lightnings caught a fleet of German planes on virtually undefended landing fields in Western Germany and destroyed 60 on the ground and 15 in the air.

Perhaps the most significant of the three-target attack by nearly 750 Flying Fortresses and Liberators from Britain was the attack on the rail yards and repair shops at Karlsruhe, just across the French-German border in the Rhineland. Mosquitoes dropped many two-ton blockbusters on Karlsruhe last night without loss.

Because of its location and huge transport facilities, Karlsruhe is a logical focal point for supplies and reinforcements which Hitler probably is marshalling for the battle of Germany. One report placed the United States Third Army within 40 miles of Karlsruhe.

Up to 500 Mustang fighters escorted the bombers and Berlin said air battles ensued.

The Daimler-Benz plane engine works and a motor transport plant were bombed visually in clear weather at Stuttgart. Karlsruhe rail targets also could be seen from aloft.

Ludwigshafen on the Rhine, the flyers encountered heavy clouds and dropped explosives by instrument on objectives not specifically described.

It has been estimated that 14,795 Allied airmen were lost by death or capture in the first 70 days of the invasion, ending Aug. 15. This was based on an average of five men to a plane, of which 2959 were lost. During the same period the Allies downed 2990 enemy craft and destroyed an additional 651 on the ground.

WALLACH OUSTER SUIT DISMISSED BY SUPREME COURT

Findings of Special Commissioner, in Favor of County Prosecutor, Held Correct.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 5.—The Missouri Supreme Court en banc, in a unanimous opinion written by Judge Laurence M. Hyde, today dismissed the ouster suit filed against Prosecuting Attorney Stanley Wallach of St. Louis County by Attorney General Roy McKittick, and gave its opinion that the findings of its Special Commissioner, in Wallach's favor, were correct and fully supported by evidence.

Wallach is Republican nominee for re-election to his office in November. In filing the ouster suit, McKittick acted at the request of the St. Louis County grand jury of October 1942, following a charge of Circuit Judge Peter T. Barrett, who was defeated for re-election in the following month. The special commissioner, in tracing the origin of the proceeding, called attention to the fact that Fred E. Mueller, Wallach's assistant in charge of liquor law cases, was the candidate opposing Judge Barrett.

Special Commissioner Roscoe P. Conkling of St. Joseph filed his report last Sept. 29. He stated his finding that Wallach "has not been guilty of any act or conduct or of any omission meriting the forfeiture of his right to occupy the office of Prosecuting Attorney."

68 Cases Handled Properly. Judge Hyde, analyzing and approving Commissioner Conkling's report, said in his opinion, approved by all the other judges: "In one instance, the commissioner analyzed 68 cases involving the liquor laws, cited by the Attorney General, and made a finding of proper handling of each case by Wallach."

As to other cases cited in the complaint, the commissioner made a finding of good faith as to Wallach, and added:

"Wallach was an able and diligent Prosecuting Attorney. He had an excellent reputation as an able, conscientious, aggressive and impartial prosecuting officer. Many law-enforcement officers testified to co-operation from him. There was no testimony in the

Allies Call on Foreign Workers In Reich to Desert Their Posts

Spokesman for Eisenhower Urges Co-ordinated Move—Belgians Are Told Time Has Come to Serve in Battle.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 (AP).—A spokesman for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower told foreign workers in Germany in a broadcast today to desert their factories at the first opportunity as the first step in a co-ordinated plan of co-operation with the Allied military offensive against the Reich.

Promising further instructions by radio and by leaflets dropped by Allied planes, the spokesman warned the workers against being provoked by the Gestapo into unorganized action. He called on them to begin now to boycott "Quisling liaison officers" employed by the German labor front as spies, the Office of War Information said.

"Hour Has Come, Strike Now," SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sept. 5 (AP).—Gen. Eisenhower broadcast to the people of Belgium and Luxembourg yesterday that the day of their liberation had begun and asked them to "serve in the battle."

U. S. TASK FORCES ATTACK VOLCANO, BONIN, WAKE ISLES

Jap Bases Shelled, Bombed—Blows in Central and South Pacific Cost 30 Ships Sunk or Damaged.

UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Sept. 5 (AP).—In what appeared to be the prelude to the next big Pacific push, 30 Japanese ships have been sunk or damaged and possibly 107 planes knocked out in a five-day period during which American warships shelled islands within 615 miles of Tokyo and bombers steadily battered the invasion-menaced Philippines.

The attacks, reported in communiqués yesterday and today, were dealt along more than 4000 miles of Japan's outer defense ring of islands—ranging from Paramushiro in the Kuriles to Dutch Timor south of the Philippines—and comprised the heaviest set of blows since the conquest of Guam in early August. The cost paid by the Americans was seven planes lost. Not a warship was damaged.

Planes alone expended more than 800 tons of explosives and hundreds of rockets. The Bonin and Volcano islands were blasted by air and sea, and while this fleet task force was operating south of Tokyo in such strength the Japanese Navy declined to challenge it, another task force pounded Wake Island 1645 miles to the east.

Japan's carefully husbanded air force made only a few scattered appearances and nothing bigger than a submarine chaser was spotted of the enemy war fleet.

Carrier Force Attacks. On Aug. 30, cruisers, destroyers and carrier planes blasted Chichi in the Bonins and two in the Volcano group. Planes also smashed Haha in the Bonins. The next day, carrier aircraft, which expended a total of 196 tons of bombs and 490 rockets, sustained the attack. Sept. 1, the warships again shelled Chichi and two. On Sept. 2, two was hit by land-based Army Liberators.

In these attacks, five Japanese cargo ships and a tanker definitely were sunk, a cargo ship and three submarine chasers probably were sunk and three submarine chasers were damaged. Eighty-five Japanese planes were accounted for—11 shot down, 35 definitely destroyed on ground and at anchor, 29 probably destroyed and 10 damaged.

Hangars, shops, warehouses, fuel dumps and antiaircraft batteries on the islands were hard hit. Chichi's seaplane base was erased. A large warehouse was destroyed at Haha. Enemy plane and shipping losses were particularly extensive at two.

5 American Planes Lost. Adm. Chester W. Nimitz's communique on the actions said five United States planes were lost. Personnel losses, however, were listed as one pilot and three flight personnel, indicating an effective rescue system was in operation.

Cruisers, destroyers and aircraft carriers poured shells and bombing planes at Wake Sept. 3, knocking out coastal defenses of that isolated base without a semblance of air opposition and against ineffective shore fire.

In air operations in the Southwest Pacific, the heaviest blow by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's flyers was a 140-ton Liberator raid Saturday on Celebes where the Japanese sent up 20 interceptors. Not an interceptor, however, opposed a series of air blows at shipping off Mindanao in the Philippines or the 73-ton blasting of Palau, naval base east of the Philippines.

At least three, perhaps seven enemy planes were shot down at Celebes and 15 more destroyed on the ground. Twelve freighters were sunk or severely damaged off Mindanao. A freighter was sunk near Halmahera, another destroyed or badly smashed off Talud. Three freighters were sent down at Celebes.

In addition to the 30 larger surface craft sunk or damaged in the American blows, a landing craft and six barges were sunk and a sampans damaged in the Bonin-Volcano strikes and nine barges were destroyed or damaged off Dutch New Guinea.

What P-38 squadrons of the Fifth Air Force believe to have been the longest fighter plane mission was carried out Saturday when Lightnings picked from famous squadrons flew a 1400-mile escort for Liberators attacking Davao, on Mindanao. The Lightnings carried belly tanks and returned without loss, downing the only three enemy interceptors which rose to combat.

Signs Japan Is Hoarding Planes. That Japan's air force has followed the Japanese fleet into hiding is suggested by lack of interception reported in official communiqués and by the fact that enemy aircraft losses in August were the lightest in more than a year. Only occasionally have airborne enemy planes interposed a challenge to Allied raiders in recent weeks. On Aug. 21, Gen. MacArthur reported the withdrawal of Japanese air forces from Halmahera and other bases in the area south of the Philippines "to bases further westward beyond our bomber range." Yesterday, MacArthur reported Nippon's air force "has been driven away from fields in southern Mindanao farther to the north and west."

Lt. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, commanding all Army Air Forces in the Pacific Ocean areas, expressed the belief last week that Japan is hoarding its planes. Only 121 Japanese aircraft were reported destroyed in the Pacific in August. Allied losses were 40. Last June, Japan's blackest month

2 WOMEN KILLED, MAN HURT WHEN TRUCK IS UPSET

Mrs. Grace Boyer and Miss Jennie Boyer of St. Louis Lose Lives in Illinois.

Two women from St. Louis were killed and a truck driver was injured early Sunday when a truck in which they were riding ran into a ditch and turned over near Gilman, Ill.

Those killed were Mrs. Grace Ann Boyer, 31 years old, and Miss Jennie Boyer, 18. They were daughter-in-law and niece, respectively, of the truck driver, Louis K. Boyer, of 3714A Oregon avenue. Boyer suffered shoulder injuries and was taken to a hospital at Watseka, Ill.

Police at Gilman said the truck apparently had been forced off the highway by another vehicle, which did not stop. Officials of the Cardox Corporation, owner of the truck and employer of Boyer, said Mrs. Boyer and Miss Boyer apparently had accompanied Boyer from St. Louis to Monee, Ill., Saturday night and were returning with him when the accident occurred.

Boyer's son, Staff Sgt. Kenneth Boyer, is on duty with the Army in France, friends told the Post-Dispatch.

Two in Automobile That Plunged 30 Feet From Hampton Viaduct.
 Clifford A. Ray, 4928. Odell street, and a woman companion escaped with minor cuts and bruises Sunday night when the automobile he was driving crashed through a concrete railing on the Hampton avenue viaduct and fell 30 feet to Manchester avenue.

Police said Ray, accompanied by Miss Marguerite Uhlenhaut, 3709A South Kingshighway, was driving south on Hampton when he apparently lost control of the car. In falling, it broke a trolley wire resulting in a small fire in the automobile.

Traffic on the Manchester street car line was interrupted for a half hour until repairs to the wire were made. Ray and Miss Uhlenhaut were treated at City Hospital, and he was booked for careless driving and destruction of city property.

RUSSIANS SURGE WITHIN 50 MILES OF YUGOSLAVIA

Frontier of East Prussia. On the eastern frontier of the German province, Russian armies have been deployed for weeks.

("Between the Bug and Narew, the Russians continued their breakthrough attempts with vast forces including large plane formations on a broad front," the German commentator, Col. Ernst von Hammer, asserted. Once before early in August the Nazis reported a Soviet crossing of the Narew, along whose banks the Germans defeated armies of the Czar in the last war.)

The Soviet command announced that the Russians yesterday captured 100 populated places southwest of Lomza, German stronghold 20 miles below the East Prussian frontier. Chormany, 15 miles southwest of Lomza and nine miles from the Nazis' Narew base of Ostroleka, was taken.

The Russian successes both below East Prussia and in Transylvania were being exploited with new attacks against fierce resistance, front dispatches said.

Russian and Romanian divisions, officially operating in coordination for the first time, pushed forward against a combined German and Hungarian force. They were heading for the Mures River valley, which runs westward into Hungary.

One supporting column veered southwestward toward Sibiu, which controls the northern exit of the Turnu Pass through the Transylvanian Alps.

Capture of Brasov, which was announced yesterday, assured complete possession of the Predal Pass through the Alps, and it was a downhill fight from there to Hungary. Sibiu, second in importance only to Brasov as a center of Transylvanian rail communications, was within 70 miles of the leading Russian and Romanian units.

Brasov, a six-way rail junction 52 miles northwest of the Ploesti oil fields, was among 150 populated places which fell yesterday to the Romanians and Russians. It is on the Transylvania side of the Carpathian Mountain chain than forms a natural flank for Red Army forces sweeping westward through the Danube valley.

The joined armies of Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky and Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin captured 6000 Germans near Calarsi, about 10 miles from the northern Bulgarian frontier. The Russians said these troops had been sent from Bulgaria as the Reds were approaching Bucharest.

(German broadcasts reported Russian troops had set up "bridgeheads" on Bulgarian territory, but there was no confirmation from Moscow.)

Red forces mopped up the last of the encircled Germans south of Chisinau in Bessarabia, capturing 3500, including Maj. Gen. Melzen, commander of the 370th Infantry Division, and killing 3000 others, the Soviet command announced.

$330 ADDITIONAL PAY SOUGHT FOR OVERTIME AT TNT PLANT

C. E. Chapman, a former guard at the Weldon Spring Ordnance plant, filed suit in United States District Court today against the Atlas Powder Co., operators of the plant, for $330 in wages alleged to be due him, plus $330 damages.

Chapman, in his petition, said he was acting as agent for numerous employees who had been refused time and one-half pay for overtime work. He listed the names of 155 others for whom he said he was acting.

He alleged in the suit that during the time of his employment, from May 9, 1942, to Jan. 12, 1944, he was paid 95 cents an hour for a 40-hour week and the same rate for 16 additional hours he worked each week, the firm refusing his demands for a higher rate of pay. He said he did not know the amount thought by the other employees to be due them.

Naturally, you'd enjoy coffee more, if you could have the very finest coffee that grows.

But you can have this rare mountain-grown coffee at its best in Folger's—you can enjoy a flavor that has never been matched by any other coffee.

What is more, Folger's is so rich in vigorous flavor we urge you to use 1/4 less when you make it. Thus, you will enjoy the most delicious coffee at no extra cost—if not actually at a saving! To get this better kind of coffee be sure to ask for Folger's.

Soviet Union Declares War Against Balky Bulgaria

ing note to the Bulgarian envoy to the U. S. S. R.: "For over three years Bulgaria has in practice helped Germany in her war against the Soviet Union. The Soviet Government took into consideration that the small country of Bulgaria was unable to resist the powerful armed forces of Germany at a time when Germany held in her hands almost all Europe. "The Soviet Government also tolerated Bulgarian ruling circles helping the Germans to evacuate from the Crimea or saving remnants of the routed German army in the south of the Soviet Union. However, in the summer of this year an acute crisis rose in the situation of Germany's armed forces.

"Caught in a pincers by Soviet troops from the east and by Allied troops which landed in France from the west, Germany found herself in a catastrophic position and her armed forces, smashed and routed, are forced to retreat on all fronts.

"Germany's Fate Decided." "Germany has finally lost Italy. Germany has lost France. After that Germany lost Romania. Even such a small country as Finland falls away because she sees that a continuation of friendly relations with Germany leads a country to disaster. The fate of Germany is decided. The war is completely lost by Germany.

"With such a turn of affairs it could be expected that Bulgaria would decide to make use of this capable moment and, following Romania and Finland, abandon her pro-German policy, break with Germany and join the anti-Hitler coalition of the democratic countries.

"Despite this, the Bulgarian Government even now refuses to break with Germany, is carrying out a policy of so-called neutrality by virtue of which she continues to render direct aid to Germany against the Soviet Union, saving her retreating forces from the pursuit of the Red Army and giving them bases on Bulgarian territory to create a new center of resistance on the part of Germany against the forces of the anti-German coalition by land as well as by sea.

"Actual Conduct of War." "The Soviet Union cannot consider this Bulgarian policy otherwise than as actual conduct of war in the camp of Germany against the Soviet Union, despite a fundamental deterioration of the military situation for Germany and despite the fact that Bulgaria has now every possibility, without fearing Germany, to break with Germany and thus save the country from disaster.

"By virtue of this the Soviet Government does not consider it possible any further to maintain relations with Bulgaria. "It breaks all relations with Bulgaria and declares that not only is Bulgaria in a state of war with the U. S. S. R. but also that the Soviet Union will henceforth be in a state of war with Bulgaria.

"The Bulgarian envoy stated he would immediately inform his Government of the Soviet Government's note. "Tass Assails New Promise. Some hours before the war declaration, Muraviev, the new Bulgarian Premier, promised to restore "democratic liberties" to his people and disarm all German troops in the country. He said Bulgaria would be compelled to break off relations with Germany if the Nazis attempted to interfere.

Muraviev's speech, in which he repeated Bulgaria's desire to maintain "unreserved, reliable neutrality," was reported caustically by the Moscow radio in a Tass news agency dispatch from Sofia. After giving the text of the speech, the Tass dispatch commented that nothing has been forthcoming from Bulgaria but "promises and nothing is known as to when these promises will be fulfilled.

"One unfortunately is compelled to state that in the sphere of foreign policy the Prime Minister's declarations represent no progress as compared with the attitude of the (Ivan) Bagrianov government."

Moscow has been urging an outright declaration of war against Germany as the only acceptable policy for Bulgaria.

The Tass statement accused the Muraviev government of being too weak "to pull Bulgaria out of the swamp in which it was thrown by pro-German rulers."

Bulgaria and Russia previously had maintained diplomatic relations throughout the war, and Adolf Hitler never succeeded in obtaining Bulgarian troops for his war in the east.

Bulgaria entered Hitler's Axis primarily to avoid a fight with Germany, World War I ally, and to further its dream of a "greater Bulgaria" at the expense of its Balkan neighbors. It signed with Hitler in April, 1941.

Romania Constitution Restored. In Romania, King Mihail issued a decree restoring the liberal constitution abolished in 1938 by his father, former King Carol. The royal decree will indirectly bring about abolition of racial laws passed during Romania's partnership in the Axis and many other anti-democratic laws.

The death of Manfred von Killinger, German minister of Romania, and his secretary, Hella Petersen, were "undoubtedly suicide," the Romanian Telegraph Service reported in a broadcast on the basis of an announcement by the Swedish minister and two physicians at Bucharest, where the bodies were found in the German legation.

The broadcast said both died "from shots through the forehead."

port was not carried by the Associated Press.

(A spokesman for the United Press in New York said that service had issued a London dispatch which quoted the Brussels radio as broadcasting: "Ladies and gentlemen: Foreign stations announced this morning at 9:30 news of the capitulation of Germany. At present we have not received confirmation of this report."

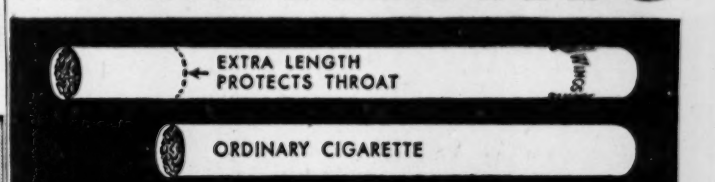

(The United Press dispatch, the spokesman said, added that this might be a garbled version of Allied front line dispatches reporting the surrender of some 10,000 German troops in the Mons area. (United States Federal Communications Commission monitors said they had not heard the "capitution" broadcast.) The Brussels denial, generally heard in London, was made in Flemish and said: "We are obliged to tell you to our deep regret that the rumor, according to which Germany was alleged to have capitulated, and which was this morning broadcast by a foreign station, has not been confirmed. The fight goes on."

(The Paris radio yesterday quoted a Swiss dispatch as saying that "the German Government has been making efforts to establish contact with Allied representatives in order to obtain a compromise peace." The French broadcast said this was the "most serious" peace attempt yet made.)

... especially, at chow time. And what a job these Army cooks have to do to satisfy the ravenous appetites of America's hard-fighting G-I's. • Each of the 250 men of Infantry Company "C", for example, consumes about 5 pounds of food a day. That's 37,500 pounds of meat, fruit, vegetables, etc., needed every month by this unit alone. And Company "C" is but one of several hundred thousand similar units of our Army. • Supplying food is one of the Army Service Forces' most formidable problems. For food, by its bulky nature, calls for vast transportation facilities. • America's railroads are carrying 93% of all Army-Navy freight and express. Food for our fighters at home and abroad is a major item. And, as greater advances are made, our men and liberated peoples will require an ever-increasing volume of food. • Over the Baltimore & Ohio's 11,000 miles of track, thundering food-laden freights are racing to ports in greater numbers than ever before. Hourly, this load soars in volume and importance. But B&O's 70,000 workers are confident that with the continued support of the Armed Services, governmental officials, and the public, B&O's part of the victory load can and will be delivered on time.

WOUNDS BROTHER WITH SHOTGUN IN FAMILY QUARREL

John Shepherd Was Looking for Another Brother When Joseph Tried to Disarm Him.

Joseph M. Shepherd, 1700 North Tenth street, was in critical condition at City Hospital today with a gunshot wound in the abdomen, suffered yesterday when he attempted to take a shotgun away from his brother, John, during a family argument.

Police said John and another brother, Alfred, 17 years old, fought briefly in the 1600 block of North Eighth street because John had been drinking. John went to his home at 1714 North Ninth street, witnesses told police, and obtained his father's shotgun.

He started in search of Alfred, police continued, but met Joseph in the 800-block of Howard street. The latter tried to disarm John, witnesses said, and the gun was discharged in the struggle. Police found the gun in a vacant lot across the street, and Joseph on the steps at 813 Howard street.

One witness told police he heard John say: "If anybody comes closer, I'll plug him." Joseph walked toward him and was shot, the witness said.

FINNISH-RUSSIAN ARMISTICE ENDS THREE-YEAR WAR

Government of preliminary conditions set by the Soviet Government, the Soviet Supreme Command has ordered ceasing of military operations along the sector held by Finnish troops from 8 a. m. on Sept. 5.

It was presumed that under terms of the negotiated armistice through which President Baron Carl Gustav Mannerheim, field marshal and commander in chief, was leading his country out of the bitter struggle, Finnish troops promptly began to fall back to their 1940 border, from which they launched their attack on the Russians when Adolf Hitler began his invasion June, 1941.

The Helsinki radio said Hackzell's cabinet was given a vote of confidence by Parliament yesterday at the close of two secret sessions at which the Premier explained measures connected with the Soviet-Finnish peace negotiations and supplemented his statement Saturday that his government had asked German troops to quit the country.

People Unhappy, but Relieved.

The announcement of the cease-firing order was first broadcast to the Finnish people at 5 a. m. yesterday, and an hour later leaflets told the story to the Helsinki population on its way to work. The people were not particularly happy, but they were obviously relieved. "Thank God at last," summed up the reaction of many.

Earlier yesterday, Tass, official Russian news agency, gave a hint that the Russians were not pleased with the Finnish attitude preliminary to the peace talks. Tass accused Hackzell of adopting an apologetic attitude toward the Germans in his Saturday declaration that Finland was quitting the war. In particular the Russians were displeased with what Tass called failure of Hackzell to mention in that declaration that Finland would break relations with the Nazis, and remove German troops by Sept. 15, two essential preconditions of the peace discussions.

However, a few hours before Mannerheim's Government announced the armistice, an official government declaration said diplomatic relations with Germany would be broken, and Germany was told that German troops remaining in Finland after Sept. 15 would be disarmed or interned as Allied war prisoners.

The Berlin radio quoted a Finnish communique announcing the severance of relations and demanding withdrawal of Nazi troops under conditions stipulated by Russia.

The Soviet midnight communique said Russian naval bombers yesterday sank a Nazi supply ship of 6000 tons in the Baltic sea and sank one high-speed landing barge and damaged two others in the Gulf of Finland. The ships possibly were withdrawing men and supplies from Finland.

PALMOLIVE, COLGATE DENTAL CREAM CLAIMS TO BE LIMITED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday an agreement by the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. to discontinue use of advertisements which the commission said "misrepresent the composition, properties and effectiveness" of certain soaps, dentifrices and shaving creams. The commission said the corporation agrees to cease and desist from representing, among other things:

That the only natural saponification oils or fats used in Palmolive soap or other soap products are olive and palm oils when actually coconut or other oils or fats are also used; that any benefit to, or improvement in the appearance of the skin consequent on the use of Palmolive soap and water is due to anything other than its cleansing properties.

With respect to its dentifrices, the corporation agreed, the commission said, to discontinue representing: That the use of Colgate dental cream will impart to the teeth any radiance, brilliance, sparkle or like property beyond that inherent in the teeth of the individual user; or that tooth decay will be prevented by use of the dental cream.

Meet a New Buick Dealer in St. Louis

Here is the modern, up-to-the-minute home of the newest Buick dealer in St. Louis

TREVELLYAN BUICK COMPANY

5640 Gravois Ave. St. Louis, Mo.

J. E. TREVELLYAN
President

C. E. JAEGER
Partner

IT is with a great deal of pleasure we announce the opening of a new Buick dealership to better service the needs of St. Louis motorists.

Maybe you think this is a funny time to be setting up shop as an automobile dealer, what with no new cars being made and all that.

But the TREVELLYAN BUICK COMPANY—5640 GRAVOIS AVENUE—doesn't think so. J. E. Trevellyan, president, and C. E. Jaeger, partner in the firm, know there's still an important wartime job to be done for car owners in their territory—and they're out to do it!

If you know these men—and plenty of motorists hereabouts do—you know they have a long and rich experience in the automobile business. Mr. Trevellyan has been in the business for 20 years. From 1924 to 1934 he travelled coast-to-coast handling wholesale oil sales to jobbers. Then he joined the Buick Motor Division as a district manager, operating out of Chicago and, later, Minneapolis. In 1938, and up to the time he opened the Trevellyan Buick Company, he successfully operated two large Buick dealerships in Iowa.

His partner, Mr. Jaeger, has a background of more than a quarter century in automobile service. During 1917 to 1921, he was a mechanic on a variety of makes. Next he became associated with a leading Buick dealer and progressed from mechanic to assistant service manager. In 1929 he joined the Buick factory service organization where he handled important service posts, including that of parts-and-service manager for the St. Louis zone.

These men know Buicks. Not only how good they are—but how to keep them running at their best, through the duration and beyond.

So, they are opening this additional St. Louis dealership, making a wartime specialty of top-notch service.

In their modern sales and service station at 5640 Gravois Avenue, they are prepared to give you the best of service on any kind of car. They have a group of men not only factory-trained in their work, but long seasoned at it.

They are also well equipped with a good stock of genuine Buick repair parts—in short, with every facility for maintaining essential transportation for Buick owners.

They'd be awfully glad to have you come by, look their place over, listen to their ideas about how good service can help you through the war period.

You know the location—5640 Gravois Avenue. Drop in any time—for a quick check-up of your car, a thorough overhaul, or just to say hello.

Nazis Killed Everything Alive In Streets of French Village

court wiped out, I took the opportunity to see for myself. It was arranged by the area commander that Earl Mazo, Greenville, S. C., of Stars and Stripes, and myself go in with an armed escort bringing up rations. When we arrived a dazed old woman was poking through burning rubble. A mustached, typical French peasant in a blue shirt and faded corduroy pants was the only other civilian visible. His eyes were red from weeping. The Germans had shot his son. From them and Lt. Philip Wagner, Cincinnati, O., whose reconnaissance column first entered the town, we pieced together the story.

Two days ago the French Forces of the Interior ambushed a German staff car nearby, whereupon members of a German panzer grenadier division surrounded the village, shooting at anything in sight. Everything alive on the streets was killed. That's how the 72-year-old grandfather died. One house caught fire. When a young man fled with clothes aflame he was shot down. Another older man was shot as he tried to run into the woods. The Germans then searched house by house, seizing every man they found. When they came to one in bed with a broken leg they just shot him and went on. The prisoners were loaded on trucks, taken outside the village and lined up before machine guns. Most of the women and children had fled terror-stricken into the woods but the wife of one man followed the Germans.

87 TORTURED, KILLED AT LYON

By SID FEDER
LYON, France, Sept. 5 (AP).—Lyon's atrocity murder of 87 Jews and Catholics in a dynamited house Aug. 24 after hours of torture drew a strong letter of protest from Pierre-Marie Cardinal Gerlier, Archbishop of Lyon, to Col. Knap, who was chief of the German Gestapo here, it was disclosed today.

Those responsible for this are dishonored forever in the eyes of humanity; may God forgive them," the Cardinal wrote, after viewing what he called the "most revolting scene" and "abominable cruelty" in all his 64 years.

The 87 men—50 of them Jews—were taken from the Fort Montluc Gestapo prison by the Germans and Jacques Doriot's collaborationist police and tortured by having nails driven through their hands, feet and chins. Then they were shot, and after many wounded had been locked inside, the house was blown up.

The French Red Cross tried to identify the bodies and brought word of the atrocity back to Cardinal Gerlier.

GOLDEN TO SERVE 3 YEARS IN PRISON; DECISION UPHELD

Commissioner Westhues said, "As to a trick and promise of immunity, the defendant's evidence was rather vague. The state's witnesses denied making any promises."

Golden was one of four officers of the local who were indicted in 1941 on charges of conspiracy and embezzlement. Edward J. Hill, former president, was convicted and sentenced to three years in prison but the Supreme Court last April reversed the conviction and remanded the case for new trial.

Earl Jenkins, a business agent, was acquitted, and Paul Hulahan, a business agent, is awaiting trial. Received $56.50, Only $21.50 Shown.

The commissioner said the evidence showed applicants for membership in the union, which was expanding rapidly in 1941 due to construction of war plants, paid Golden $56.50 in initiation fees and dues on joining, but that the cash journal of the union showed payment of only $21.50.

Golden told Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, the commissioner said, that two fake Federal revenue agents called on union officers in October, 1941, declaring they were investigating reported job selling, and took charge of $41,000 in a safe deposit box opened for them by Golden, with an explanation they would return with the money. Golden said they did not return.

In the confession, later repudiated, Golden said he and other union officers had embezzled $6000. He testified he signed the statement after he had been told the other officers were making him the "goat."

The court sustained the action of Judge Williams in overruling a defense motion for a continuance, which asserted newspaper articles about the union's funds had aroused prejudice and it would be impossible to obtain a fair trial. The opinion said Judge Williams displayed "unusual calmness" and granted the defendant all of his rights under the law.

"We fail to discover any point that was overlooked," Commissioner Westhues said, in observing the case was hotly contested. "In view of the overwhelming evidence against the appellant, the deliberate falsification of the books, we deem the punishment assessed, three years imprisonment, evidence that the jury was not prejudiced against him. The maximum is five years."

JUDGMENT FOR DALTON ON INCOME TAX UPHELD

State Supreme Court Limits 5-Year Statute of Limitations Applies.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 5.—The five-year statute of limitations on civil actions brought in the name of the State applies to suits for collection of State income taxes, the Missouri Supreme Court ruled today, in affirming a lower court judgment for Grover Dalton of Poplar Bluff, chairman of the Republican State Committee.

Division No. 2 of the court, in an opinion by Supreme Court Commissioner Paul W. Barrett, held that suits filed by Attorney General McKittick against Dalton in Butler County in 1942 to collect State income taxes alleged to be due for 1931, 1932 and 1934 totaling $162, were barred by the general statute of limitations. The income-tax law contains no no specific provision limiting the time in which the State may begin suits to collect alleged delinquent income taxes. Dalton contended the general law on limitations in civil actions brought in the name of the State, barred the suits.

Commissioner Barrett held that suits to collect claims for State income taxes fell within the provisions of the general act on limitations, and sustained Dalton. All of the judges of the division concurred.

held that suits filed by Attorney General McKittick against Dalton in Butler County in 1942 to collect State income taxes alleged to be due for 1931, 1932 and 1934 totaling $162, were barred by the general statute of limitations. The income-tax law contains no no specific provision limiting the time in which the State may begin suits to collect alleged delinquent income taxes. Dalton contended the general law on limitations in civil actions brought in the name of the State, barred the suits.

Commissioner Barrett held that suits to collect claims for State income taxes fell within the provisions of the general act on limitations, and sustained Dalton. All of the judges of the division concurred.

CLOTHES SET AFIRE BY BOY

Quintus O. White, 1044 Hickory street, was in City Hospital today with body burns he suffered when a small boy set fire to his clothing early Sunday as White was lying in front of 520 St. Joseph street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Wallace, who live at the St. Joseph street address, told police they saw White's clothing burst into flames after the boy sat down beside him and struck a match. White told police he had been drinking and lost consciousness.

Washington Favors Thorough Job Of Occupying Reich and Japan to Eliminate War Potential of Both

Idea Seems to Be to Get It Over With as Quickly as Possible, but to Enforce Terms to the Letter—Task in Orient to Be Concern Principally of U. S.

By WILFRID FLEISHER

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.

PLANS for the military occupation of both Germany and Japan have been worked out to such an extent that it is now possible to envisage a general outline of the policy to be adopted after the defeat of both enemies.

The pattern for both countries coincides to the extent that they are both to be occupied militarily and that neither, as President Roosevelt has stated, can escape occupation by surrendering before an Allied invasion, as was the case with Germany after World War I. In other words, both countries are to be taught a lesson they will never forget, but aside from this they are to be treated as befits each case.

The Allied military occupation of Germany is to be a three-party affair, in which the United States, Britain and Russia are to share, although it is understood that they will maintain separate forces in different zones.

Japan Is U. S. Job.

On the other hand, the occupation of Japan is expected to be largely an American affair, with Britain and China participating only to a limited extent, and perhaps Russia if it eventually enters the Pacific war. President Roosevelt indicated as much when he declared at a recent press conference that the job of sealing off Japan from the peace-loving world until it had shown itself able to live with peaceful countries would be principally a responsibility of the United States, because, with the exception of the Burma theater, the American forces in the Pacific are stronger than those of its Allies.

The occupations of both Germany and Japan are expected to be on a large scale, sufficient to supervise the disarmament of these aggressor nations as well as to police them. Since the occupation of Germany is to be a three-power affair, the one-third share of this country will not call for as large a force as will ultimately be needed in Japan, which may be double the military occupation of both Germany and Japan are understood to be based on the assumption that the German and Japanese governments will have been overthrown or disappeared by that time, and that it will be necessary to establish a military government until such time as some new acceptable government comes into being. It is intended to bridge the gap until some new authority, along democratic lines, is constituted, with whom the Allies may deal.

Thorough Job Planned.

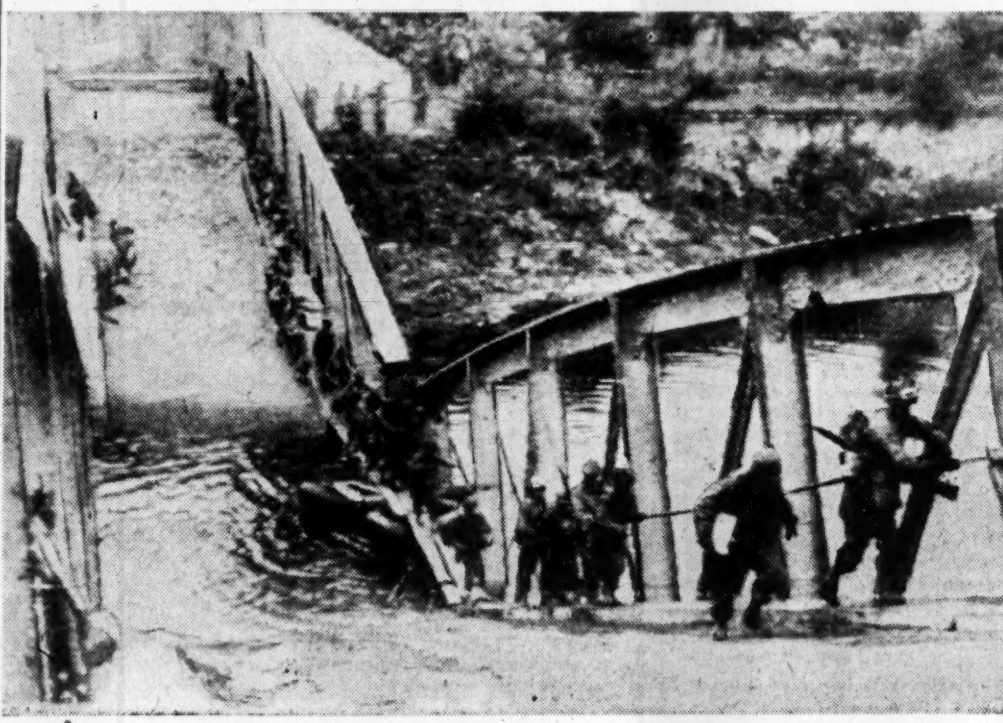

Opinion here, which has for some time been divided, as to whether the large or small scale occupation of the defeated nations should be carried out and whether it should be a short or long term one seems now to have crystallized in favor of doing a thorough job and in getting it over with as soon as possible. This will require large occupation forces, but since demobilization must in any event be gradual, in keeping with the capacity of business and industry to absorb the discharged soldiers, it is not figured that it will make a great difference, provided the occupation is not a prolonged one.

But no one can predict how long the occupation of Germany or Japan may last. This will depend entirely on conditions, now unpredictable, within the defeated countries. One of the first tasks will be to see that arms are surrendered and that heavy industries are destroyed or rendered inoperative. This will require that the occupation forces go into every part of the country to see to it that the disarmament terms are carried out. Once this has been accomplished, and there are no large scale dangers, the occupation forces can be whittled down to garrisons in the main cities or in strategic zones.

These garrisons can be gradually reduced in time until they are eventually withdrawn, leaving the control to military forces to be maintained under the peace structure and which would resort to sanctions in the event of any violations of the armistice or peace terms.

One of the objectives of military occupation is to impress upon the defeated peoples as a whole that they have lost the war and that aggression does not pay. Coupled with the punishment of war criminals, this should discourage a new generation from making another try and precipitating a third world war.

SUBMARINE TOWS FLYER TO SAFETY WITH PERISCOPE

Craft Evades Japanese Guns and Later Takes Downed Pilot Aboard.

By LT. MILBURN McCARTY JR., Marine Corps Combat Correspondent.

SOMEWHERE IN THE PACIFIC (Delayed) (AP).—The fantastic story of how a navy aviator, shot down at sea, held on to the periscope of a submerged United States submarine and was towed two miles to safety was told today upon the submarine's return from a mission in Japanese waters.

The submarine, which must go unnamed, was prowling around a Jap island at the same time our planes were making a raid. When one of the planes was hit, the pilot, Ensign Donald C. Brandt of Cincinnati, O., jumped out at 12,000 feet. He alighted safely in the water only two miles off the Japanese island.

The submarine went to the rescue, but as it drew near, Japanese shore batteries started shelling the area. Shells hit within a few yards of the submarine and it had to submerge.

Before taking his craft under, the skipper got a good look at Brandt struggling helplessly in the water. He knew the pilot would be killed or captured by the Japs unless rescued immediately. So he decided to try something new. He kept the submarine just far enough under water so the top of the periscope remained out. That way, he could still see the pilot, and he made directly for him.

"I wanted him to catch on to the periscope, so we could drag him out of range of the guns," explained the submarine skipper. "We made three passes at him before he caught on to what we were trying to do."

With Brandt hanging on to the periscope, the submarine moved out to sea.

"We still had to stay submerged because of the shelling, and it was tough going for the pilot," the skipper continued. "There he was, out of the water half the time and under it the other half. We towed him this way for two miles, until we got out of their range. I could look through the other periscope and see him being dragged through the waves."

Finally, after an hour of towing, the submarine surfaced and took Ensign Brandt aboard.

INCOME IN U. S. AT NEW HIGH OF 158 BILLION A YEAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—National income reached a new high annual rate of 158 billion dollars and national production a new high annual rate of 196 billion dollars in the first half of 1944, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

While reaching new heights, however, expansion of both income and production in the first six months of 1944 was at slackened rates, the department said, the 3 per cent in gross national production over the final half of 1943 representing only about one-fourth of the average half-yearly increase recorded since 1941.

Consumer expenditures rose to more than 95 billion dollars at annual rates, the report showed, continuing the upward trend throughout the war period. There were clear indications, however, the department added, that the wartime upsurge in demand largely had run its course. Increase in consumer expenditures over 1941 was attributed largely to price changes "but even when allowance is made for the over-all position of civilian consumers has been favorable during the war."

90-Billion Loss on War Surplus Worth 105 Billion Is Predicted

Joint Committee Member Says Not More Than 15 Billion Can Be Recovered Without Destroying Domestic Economy.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—LEGISLATORS trying to figure out how to get rid of perhaps 105 billion dollars' worth of leftover war supplies estimated today that the Government is going to take a 90-billion-dollar loss.

"We'll have 105 billion dollars worth of surplus property," Representative Manasco (Dem.), Alabama, told reporters, "and we'll do well to realize 15 billion dollars—and that includes war plants."

"Of course, if we want to go and destroy our domestic economy, we might get 30 billion."

Manasco said he thinks other members of a Senate-House committee who are attempting to work out a compromise surplus property disposal bill are fully aware that there is likely to be a 90-billion loss and that the American people also should be prepared for it.

Chairman of the House delegation to the conference committee, Manasco said members realize that a tremendous amount of war goods won't be worth dismantling or transporting home when the fighting stops.

"Take a B-24 bomber," he said. "It takes 500 man-hours to dismantle one, and it couldn't bring more than $2500 in scrap. And they aren't any good for commercial airplanes because they are too heavy and burn too much gas."

Furthermore, he said, what good

PRAYDA CHARGES BULLITT LIES IN SAYING ITALY FEARS RUSSIA
MOSCOW, Sept. 5 (AP).—In an article published by Pravda, Communist party paper, the Russian writer Konstantin Demidov bitterly criticizes William C. Bullitt, former United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union, asserting he was in "political bankruptcy" because "he never was a serious politician but only an intelligence agent."

Demidov says "we counted 30 lies" in an article Bullitt wrote from Rome for Life in which he asserted Italians feared the war would result in "the subjugation of Europe by Moscow instead of Berlin. Bullitt wrote that the Italians fear Austria is falling under control of Moscow and that this would mean the advance of Stalinism into Lombardy," said Demidov. "This is cheap and silly."

Demidov asserted Bullitt "picks up everything possible from the old arsenal of anti-Soviet calumny and brings it to the market of political speculation."

ARGENTINE OFFICIAL OUSTED

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 5 (AP).—Lt. Col. Carlos Zavalla, who recently took strong measures against the press and foreign commercial interests, was dismissed as federal interventor for Entre Rios Province yesterday by executive decree.

Zavalla recently ordered expropriation of a power plant owned by foreign capital after the national government had issued a statement declaring all such actions would be effected by normal legal procedure. Zavalla also expropriated the province's leading newspaper, El Diario de Parana.

Pyle Proposes Medal for Aid Men at Front

Medical Workers Run Same Risks as Combat Troops, He Says.

By ERNIE PYLE

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

IN FRANCE (By Wireless).—HE last time I was with the front-line medics—a battalion detachment in the Fourth Division—the Stars and Stripes about Congress passing the new $10-a-month pay increase for soldiers holding the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

This Combat Infantryman's Badge is a proud thing, a mark of great distinction, a sign on a man's chest to show that he has been through the mill. The medical aid men were feeling bad because the place said they were not eligible for the badge.

Their Captain asked me what I thought, and so did some of the enlisted aid men. And I could tell them truthfully that my feelings agreed with theirs. They should have it. And I'm sure any combat infantryman would tell you the same thing.

They were 31 men and two officers. And in one seven-week period of combat in Normandy this summer they lost nine men killed and 10 wounded. A total of 19 out of 33 men—a casualty ratio of nearly 60 per cent in seven weeks!

As one aid man said, probably they have been excluded because they are technically noncombatants and don't carry arms. But he suggested that, if this were true, they could still be given a badge with some distinctive medical marking on it, to set them off from medical aid men who don't work right in the lines.

So I would like to propose to Congress or the War Department or whoever handles such things that the ruling be altered to include medical aid men in battalion detachments and on forward.

They are the ones who work under fire. Medics attached to regiments and to hospitals farther back do wonderful work too, of course, and are sometimes under

G. I. Joe Turns Tourist in Paris; Succumbs to Lure of Smart Shops, Strolls and Gawks on Boulevards

Cartier's, Lanvin and Molyneux Vie With Eiffel Tower and Arc de Triomphe for His Attention and His Money—Yanks Crowd Cafes and Night Spots.

By HENRY B. JAMESON

PARIS, Sept. 5, (AP).

THE G. I. in Paris has turned tourist. Like any prewar visitor, he gawks at the Eiffel Tower and the Arc de Triomphe, buys up exotic perfumes by the gallon to send home to his girl, strolls down the great boulevards and jams the sidewalk cafes.

Still a bit wobbly from the affection showered on him by the liberated Parisians, he has the run of the town.

As the city emerges from the darkness of German occupation, the Yank khaki and helmet mingle with the latest Paris creations along the Champs Elysees, the Rue de la Paix and the Rue Capucines.

Automobiles are few and taxis are non-existent, but G. I. Joe sees hundreds of cycles and even some horse-drawn carriages. The latter catch his fancy and he hires them by the dozen for his sight-seeing trips.

In the windows he finds such rare items as photographic film, which he cannot obtain at any price in England and America. He is told it is there because it was made in local plants under German supervision and unused because of a shortage of developing paper and he buys it in heaps. He even buys cameras at outlandish prices.

He enjoys rubbernecking at the shop windows during his strolls, at colorful costumes, hats, shoes, jewelry and perfumes, which he acquires at anywhere from $2 to $50 a bottle. He got a look at Eiffel Tower, but not as close as he might wish. It houses vital radio equipment and is closed to visitors.

Soon he will make the rounds of the night spots. The 9 p. m. curfew has been lifted, but a fuel and electricity shortage has blotted out night club or theater activity. However, a number of the better known spots—the Folies Bergere, the Club Lido and the Bal Tabarin, for instance—

He sees a city about to return to normal. Office buildings which housed prominent American firms were being cleared of the debris left by the Nazis. The National City Bank, for instance, had been German propaganda headquarters; the Bankers' Trust Building, a distribution point for German officers' clothing; the Equitable Trust Building and the Chase-National Bank, German offices, and Lloyd's of London, the German banking house.

The Thomas Cook travel agency, however, remained open throughout the occupation and officials there said they already have had inquiries about Clipper bookings for New York.

Polish Patriots' Union in Russia Demands All of German Silesia

By LEIGH WHITE

The Chicago Daily News—Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1944.

MOSCOW, Sept. 5.

ACCEPTING the "Curzon line" as the eastern frontier of post-war Poland, the Union of Polish Patriots in the U. S. S. R. want to annex from Germany both lower and upper Silesia, as well as East Prussia and Pomerania as far west as the Oder River.

In an article entitled, "Silesia must return to Poland," Polpress, the information bulletin of the Polish Patriots, today based Poland's historical claim for Silesia on the battle of Glogau in 1109. Silesia has been part of Germany only since the peace of Breslau in 1742, Polpress asserts, and its history ever since has been the history "of the desperate struggle of the Polish population against brutal Germanization."

Citing eight rebellions against German rule during the Eighteenth and Nineteenth centuries, the bulletin recalls that the "fall of the Hohenzollern monarchy in November, 1918, heralded the dawn of freedom for Silesians." The Commission at Versailles (headed by Jules Combar, colleague of Clemenceau) unanimously voted to incorporate Silesia into Poland, Polpress continues, and adds that "the plebiscite of Mar. 20, 1920, which gave the Germans a small majority, can by no means be regarded as reflecting the true and ethnographic relationships in Silesia."

The article states that the results of the plebiscite "can only be explained by unscrupulous German terrorism, the importation of 200,000 so-called repatriates who had nothing but forged documents connected with Silesia, and the utter indifference of the Warsaw government." In local elections prior to the plebiscite, according to Polpress, there were 312,000 Polish against 245,000 German votes.

The Union of Polish Patriots bases its claim for Silesia on economic as well as ethnographical considerations.

"The new Europe needs a strong and independent Poland," Polpress asserts. "Independence and political strength are functions of economic might which Poland can secure only by recovery of the whole of Silesia. Silesia is the sole and natural base of Polish industry. Restitution of Silesia will triple the output of coal and steel as compared with the output in Poland before 1939. This will at long last permit Polish industry to stand on its own feet."

ENVOY DENIES SPAIN OFFERS HAVEN FOR NAZI LEADERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—The Spanish Government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, says its envoy here, "has nothing in common with National Socialism" and does not intend to provide a haven for Nazi and Fascist leaders.

Ambassador Juan Francisco de Cardenas issued this statement Sunday in response to a Moscow broadcast of last week in which the Spanish people were urged to oust the Franco government, which was accused of harboring Axis refugees.

The Spanish Government, the Ambassador said, "is essentially based on Christian principles," and therefore has no ties with the Nazis.

Defense of Johnson Act

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The editorial, "High Time to Kill It," on Aug. 26, advocating repeal of the Johnson Act of 1934, which prohibits loans by American individuals or corporations to foreign governments in default on their payments of prior debt to the United States Government, exemplifies an amazing trend of thought.

It suggests that the United States must continue to pour out our money and goods to all countries and peoples of the world with the veritable certainty that little if any of it will ever be returned. More of the New Deal philosophy, that he who is better off, regardless of how he became that way, must give up to those who have less, regardless of why?

The Johnson Act may have been a futile gesture to lock the door after the horse was gone, for in 1934 and since, no sane individual would have lent his funds to foreign governments (with the possible exception of Finland and Argentina, sole maintainers of their debts to the United States and its citizens) except at most, usurious rates. But it was an attempt to legislate honesty into countries that had borrowed our money to build vast armaments for their coming wars and to stop domestic lunatics from further loss of their money.

Until a new crop of suckers is born who will not know the sad financial history of the World War I loans, I doubt if there will be a resumption of lending money overseas—unless, like lend-lease, we are forced into it by our political overlords. WM. WARREN.

Pantywaist Fatalism

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The men in the plant where I work are mostly 50 or older. They lived through the last war and weathered the depression. Now they are looking for another war and depression that will be "even more destructive and widespread."

Yes, they are looking for this to happen; yet they never say anything about trying to avoid it. What is the matter with us Americans? Are we willing to let history always move in cycles? They say there is nothing that can be done to stop it. And I say to everyone who has that attitude that he is a spineless pantywaist. I pray to God that they are in a minority. If we don't use a little initiative, a little forethought and a lot of horse sense, we can no longer be called a leading nation. J. EDWARD FREER.

Two Fronts of Racial Amity

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The church ought to lead the way to better race relations. It should practice what it preaches.

The Rev. A. Ritchie Low of Johnson (Vt.) United Church has given this a trial this summer. He brought 81 Negro children from Manhattan to his city to visit in white homes for a few days. The results were gratifying, as the children of both races changed their attitudes. Mr. Low says: "The Negro is not a problem but a human being to be understood."

St. Louis can take its place along with Vermont. The inter-racial workers of the People's Art Center of 2811 Washington are to be commended for carrying on one of the finest projects in better race relations this summer at a time when things seem so tense. More than 900 children of the different races of the city have worked together each week making and dressing puppets. They have come from the different child-care centers of the city. They have created their own stories and plays. Miss Jennie Walbert and her workers have made it possible for children all over the city to know each other. Democracy that makes for better citizenship is being carried out at the center. BERTHA BLOCH RHODA.

He Says It's Political

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Campaign expenses of the fourth-term candidate for his first trip after nomination are reported to have been only $20,000,000.

The Army said his talk made from a navy yard at the end of the Pacific trip was a political speech. Mimeographed copies have been distributed to the armed forces, a circumstance which in itself tips the scales in favor of the Army's position even though an Under Secretary rules that the speech was not political.

In this connection, the complaint is heard that Mr. Roosevelt's moves are all regarded by the opposition as political. And why not? When the fourth-term candidate broke the two-term-only tradition, he put his administration and himself under the implication of politics, and in almost everything he has said and done since he has succeeded in fulfilling that implication.

George Norris' Monument

Democracy is a stronger institution in our country because of the 40 years George W. Norris spent in its public service. His career, now ended by death at 83, is a massive landmark of unflinching progressivism, of political independence, of selfless devotion to the national welfare.

George Norris dedicated all his days to battling the forces that drag democracy down. They were powerful forces, too: political reaction, business greed, partisanship, corruption, obsolete institutions, popular lethargy.

In every fight, the odds seemed at first hopelessly against the Nebraska Senator. He was ridiculed, reviled, misrepresented, conspired against. Yet his forlorn minority, by the power of logic and persistence and integrity, at length carried the day, and the people gained the benefits.

The record is long and brilliant. It embodies constitutional reform, in abolishing the lame-duck session of Congress, and it extends to reform in his home State, in the pioneering achievement of Nebraska's one-house Legislature. It includes protection of labor's rights, exposure of Power Trust machinations, blocking of many an unfit appointment, establishment of popular welfare ahead of party welfare.

Above all, there is his living monument, the Tennessee Valley Authority. Its creation resulted from the longest of Norris' many battles, at times the most hopeless and in total achievement the greatest triumph.

At its beginning shortly after World War I, the objective was to keep the great Muscle Shoals project out of private exploiters' hands and to save it for the people. As in many of his battles, Norris was profoundly discouraged after early setbacks. He said mournfully in 1925:

Muscle Shoals must be fought over again. I expect to lose. I am going on even though I stand absolutely alone. I am going to do the best I can, but I cannot last long and keep up such an uneven, unfair contest. . . . They'll never name a dam after me.

But the long fight at last was won, and the mighty organism of TVA was created, to rescue a rich but neglected region from the ravages of its uncured rivers, and to serve as an example for other valleys at home and abroad. They did name a dam for him. When the veteran fighter saw it at work, there were tears on his cheeks, and he said: "This is my epitaph."

Norris was keenly interested in the developing movement to bring to the Missouri Valley the benefits of unified planning so superbly demonstrated by the TVA. One of his last public statements was in emphatic approval of the project to install one big plan for one big river.

To treat the Missouri River system as a whole, for simultaneous development of flood control, irrigation, navigation and power, without concern for state lines, is the only feasible solution, Norris said. His advice to the Missouri Valley was plain:

If we control the floods as they have been controlled in the Tennessee Valley by building dams and storing the waters, we will be able to let them out when the dry season comes and irrigate the great bread-basket of the Union.

The possibilities in the way of production of crops almost stagger the imagination, and in addition we will be able to carry to the homes and the factories in this great valley the electric power that shall change civilization as it by magic.

Why can we not look upon the Tennessee Valley and find an answer? . . . If we will disregard the claims of the monopolies and think only of the good of the people of the country and the experience of our own Government in the Tennessee Valley, the problem becomes at once very, very simple.

George Norris was never a man to rest on achievements launched or honors won. He did not consider the TVA as a project for only one valley; he foresaw adoption of its principle all over the nation and, specifically, in the Missouri Valley.

In these days of glowing tributes to his memory, no testimonial could be of greater satisfaction to this grand American than the knowledge that the idea of unified river control is being advocated in his home valley, and that the battle will not end until, following his own example, it is won.

Nazi Shucks

Truly, the Nazis are losing their grip. Their propaganda lacks the almost tile-like slickness which in their palmy balmy days gave it a certain noticeable gloss. The Essener National Zeitung, for instance, is trying to discourage the more ardent displays of luxury by asserting that "when cigarettes and cigars have scarcity value, it cannot be considered an expression of the people's community feeling when men are seen strutting along with fat cigars."

The Essener National Zeitung has committed the folly of ignoring the fundamentals of human nature. As it should know, the number of persons who strut along with fat cigars in order to express the people's community feeling is practically negligible. In cold fact, it is well known that one of the main reasons why people smoke at all is to have something to do with their hands. This all too obviously has nothing whatever to do with community feeling.

It is probably pretty late in the day for anything to make much difference about what is going to happen to the Essener National Zeitung, to its proprietor, H. Goering, or to community feeling in its trade territory. But if the paper is interested in salvaging a bad bit of propaganda just as a matter of pride, American advertising technique offers innumerable examples ripe for the following. Persons seen strutting along with fat cigars could be said to look repellent to women, or to prospective business clients, or to employers of labor. They might be declared, by a coterie of famous personages, to be misguided. Anything but that community-feeling angle, which isn't even good corn, but, frankly, sheer shucks.

Finland Quits

Finland has at last, after three years, quit the Axis camp and made armistice with Russia—not because it experienced any change of heart, but because it was beaten so badly that even its intransigent leaders could no longer refuse to recognize the obvious fact of defeat.

There are indications that, after suing for armistice and accepting terms, the Finns tried to stall off severing diplomatic relations with Germany. The Moscow radio's complaint yesterday on this point suggested as much.

What of Finland's future? Apparently Russia is unwilling to grant that country the co-belligerent status in which she accepted Italy and to which she has invited Romania. The armistice terms themselves are only preliminary to conversations out of which a permanent treaty will come.

If the terms are those suitable to an enemy which has to be crushed before it would quit, and which has not ceased to harbor enmity, Finland should not be surprised. It cast its lot with the Nazi New Order, and lost; and in defeat it is unregenerate.

Failure of a Promotion Drive

The power of American press-agency is stupendous, but it has come a sad cropper in the case of Romania's ex-King Carol. Some 18 months ago, the exiled monarch, living in Mexico, hired a New York publicity firm, for a fee of $35,000 a year, to sell him to the world as a good democrat, worthy of affection by the United Nations and reinstatement on his former throne.

Our publicity men have sold many products, causes and individuals to the public, but never was such sales resistance encountered as in the case of this royal racketeer. When Carol's agent arranged for him to speak on a nation-wide radio chain, public opposition became so vehement that the broadcast was canceled. Little more has been heard of the client since then, but now his name turns up in a dispatch from Moscow. George Popp, a Peasant party delegate on the armistice commission, was asked about the former ruler's chances to regain power, and dismissed him in a sentence: "Carol is through in the King business forever."

This total failure of a promotion campaign bears a moral for all press agents: a commodity must have some merit before there's even a faint hope of putting it over.

Mr. Shakespeare Said It

Yesterday the hated Yankees established a beachhead on first place in the torrid American League war and our Brownies, who have led since June 1, are now a half-game behind. There was a matter of a home run by Roy Cullenbine in the first game with Cleveland that spelled disaster for the Browns, while the Yanks' heavy artillery was compiling 24 runs in two games.

We don't suppose the Browns, this morning after the night before, are too happy, yet we urge them to remember that Mr. Shakespeare, who knew quite a lot about the human heart, found that adversity has its uses. An ugly thing it is, yet, like the ugly and venomous toad, it wears a precious jewel in its head. And that means that the Brownies, bruised and battered though they be, now can find the courage, the oomph and the base hits to climb back where they belong.

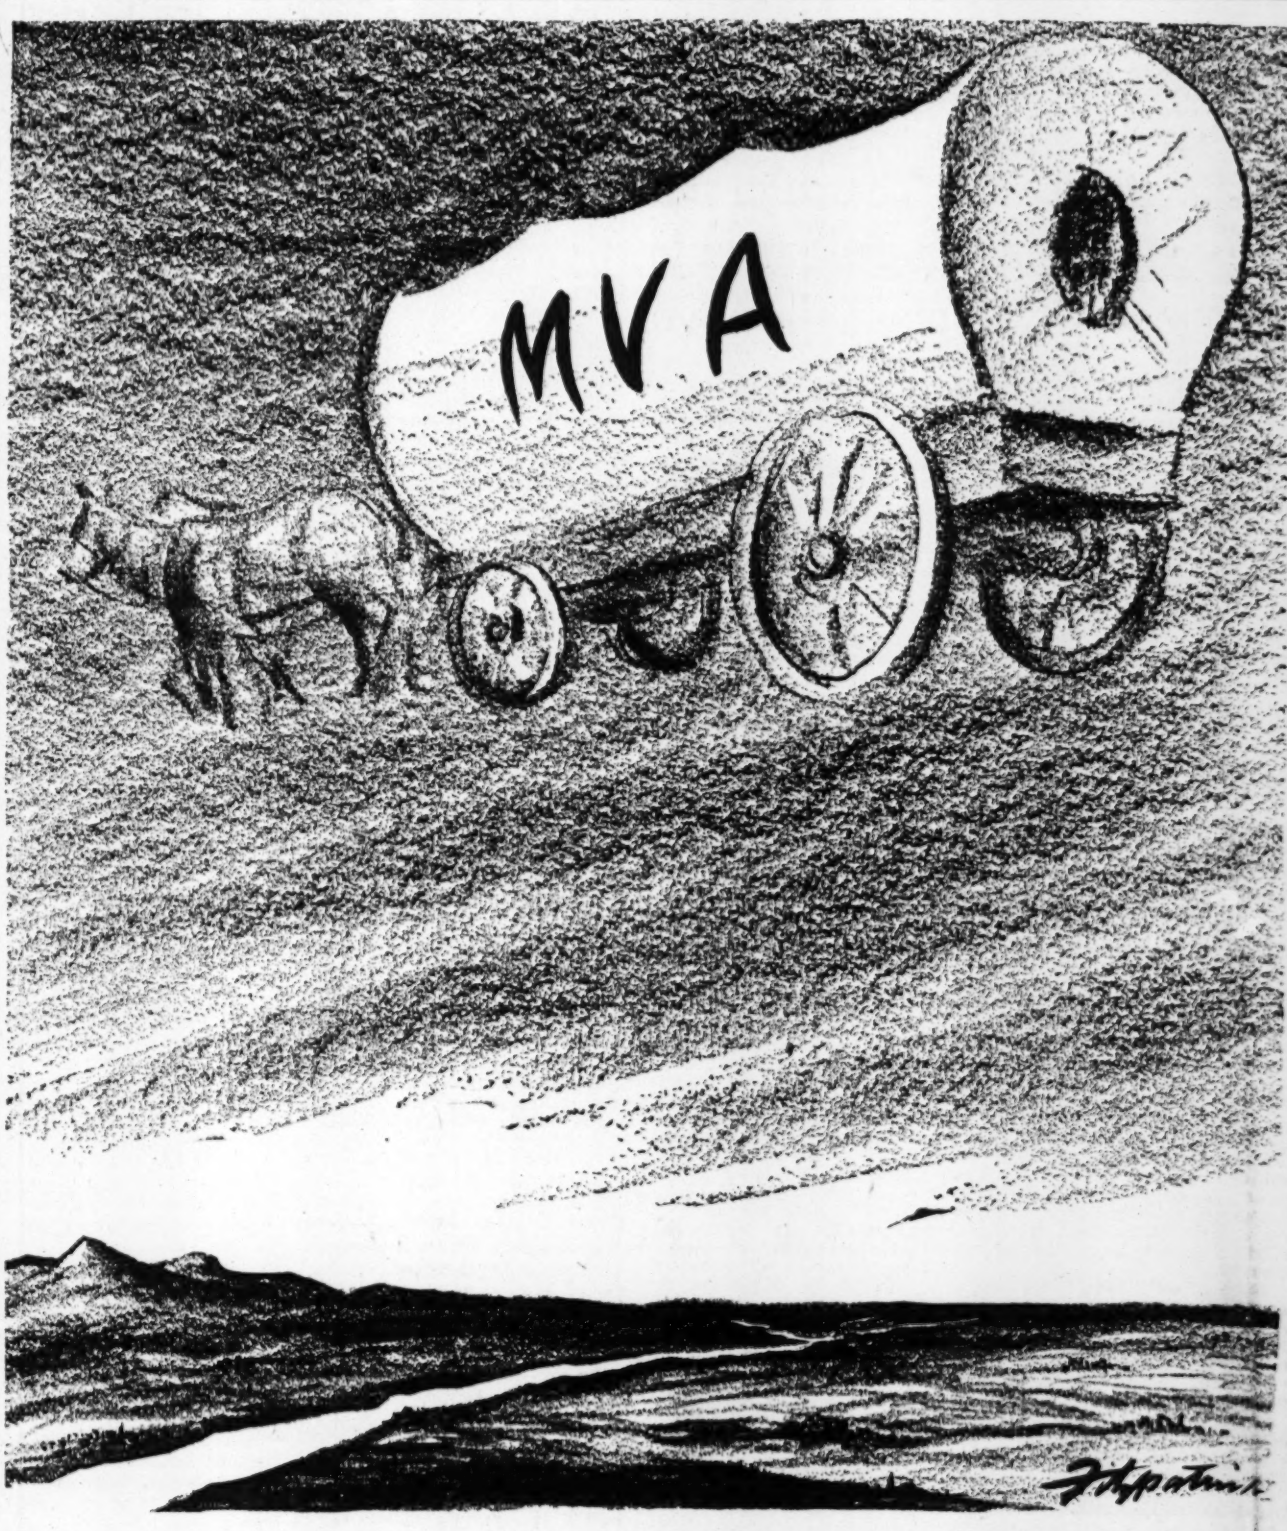

Arithmetic and Protocol

Is bringing Governors to the microphones for Mr. Dewey in covets of three to be continued through the whole list? If so, who will be the twenty-fifth speaker who goes it alone? How will he be selected? Will it be for some special magic of persuasiveness? Or will it be the least impressive among them, held to the end in the thought that the first 24 will so captivate the American ear that the last will not matter much one way or the other? Will it, perchance, be Gov. Bricker?

No one can say except the Republican National Committee and Mr. Dewey, and they are not saying. From the outside, however, it looks as though they were creating unnecessarily perplexing points of preference and protocol, for there is a sound integral solution to the whole problem. In fact, there are two solutions. As the Democrats would have it, one Governor less. And the Republicans, two Governors more.

Since neither solution is possible until after the election, the campaign strategists are disturbing all the orderly mathematical minds in the country by not wheeling up their gubernatorial canon in fives instead of threes.

Senator Truman, speaking in Detroit, advocates a "two-step plan" for reconversion. In any event, it won't be a waltz.

MODERN PIONEERING ON A GRAND SCALE

Our Terms to Germany

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Doctrine of unconditional surrender served a good purpose, but now does more harm than good, writer says; no reason to bargain with Nazis, but Allied statement of postwar intentions is urged; purpose would be to hasten crack-up of the Reich and save lives.

Bruce Bliven, Editor of the New Republic, in Magazine Digest

We have reached a stage of the war where a highly-important decision should be taken at the earliest possible moment:

The Allies should go beyond the demand for "unconditional surrender." The phrase has served its purpose; it was for a time a useful idea; but as it stands, it is today doing more harm than good.

When this ultimatum first came out of the Casablanca meeting of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt, there were good reasons for it.

The statement remembered vividly that the First World War was ended through an armistice supposedly based on President Wilson's 14 Points. In fact, however, by the time the peace was finally written, most of the 14 points were pretty well out of the window.

This enabled the Germans to say that they had been tricked into laying down their arms on false promises, although actually the Germans would have been forced to surrender a few weeks later, regardless of promises.

But conditions have changed since Casablanca. The Allies themselves have not been consistent in living up to this principle. Japan was given a pretty definite set of peace terms in the Cairo conference, Finland was given a clear set of peace terms by Soviet Russia. Russia's promise to the Balkan countries when her armies reached the Romanian border involved peace terms as regards the possible annexation of territory.

Even Germany has had, unofficially, a pretty clear indication of certain peace terms, such as the loss of East Prussia, Eastern Pomerania and part of Silesia.

These terms, however, are not officially confirmed, and most important of all, the Germans do not know what additional conditions may be imposed upon them. Their rulers are therefore able to say to them: "You must fight on to the last, because if the Allies win, your fate will be so terrible that nothing else could be as bad." The mood thus created could easily cost us the lives of many thousands of Allied soldiers.

For Statement of Aims

Under these circumstances, the proper course seems to me fairly clear. We do not need to bargain in advance with the Germans, or offer them an explicit set of conditions like Wilson's 14 Points, which were inevitably modified under the impact of nationalistic peace-conference ambitions. We can, however, describe to the Germans their role in the kind of postwar world we want.

Yet it is not at all certain that the people of any of the three great Allied powers know exactly what sort of postwar world they do want, or how Germany should fit into it. We cannot give conditions to the Germans until we are agreed as to what those conditions should be; and we cannot agree among ourselves until our own main lines of policy are clear.

The most important thing on earth is for Americans, members of the British Commonwealth, Russians and Chinese to agree now to retain firm friendship among themselves, thus making another world war as unlikely as possible. What we have in common is far more important than what separates us, and our continued amity is the best guarantee against a resurgence of Fascism anywhere, under whatever guise.

Outline of Possible Policy

It seems to me, therefore, that we ought first to come to agreement among ourselves and then say to the German people, and mean it:

"We propose to punish severely a good many thousand actual war criminals. We intend that, as far as is humanly possible, you shall make good the damage you have done throughout Europe, and shall restore to its rightful owners the loot you have stolen. We may take some territory away from you in the interest of general justice and a permanently peaceful Europe.

"We do not intend, however, to destroy all Germans, root and branch. We realize that a high level of prosperity in the rest of Europe is impossible if Germany is kept in poverty and distress. We are prepared to believe that some of you can still be restored to a faith in democratic principles, and will work with such Germans in the interest of permanent peace and prosperity."

Surrender Still Essential

Naturally, there is no reason why Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt should flatly abandon the idea of unconditional surrender.

Unconditional surrender precludes bargaining with the enemy, but it does not preclude letting him know in advance what you propose to do to him, or having the Allied leaders supplement their ultimatum with a statement of the sort of postwar world in which the Germans may expect to live. The Russian press has indicated a readiness for such a change.

Reliable evidences show that the German people are badly shaken in their faith in Hitler and his minions. They will crack, and what we want is a policy that will make them crack at the earliest moment, without involving ourselves in obligations which might haunt us later.

I submit that the course I have outlined would shorten the war, save lives and yet give Germany no more than all sensible people are agreed that she should have.

HOME-FRONT CASUALTIES

From the Chicago Sun.

Since Pearl Harbor, seven times as many Americans have been killed in accidents on the home front as in battles on the fighting front. Because of this, 750,000,000 man-days have been lost on production lines—the time it would take to build 35,000 bombers or 108 battleships.

A nation at war must expect losses in battle. But it cannot afford this appalling loss of life, with its waste of man power, materials and time, at home.

With the National Safety Council, we urge all Americans to do their part in curbing the death toll by using common sense, more courtesy and greater caution.

An Attack on the Bureaucrats For Being Both Busy and Idle

"The Bureaucrat," by John H. Crider. (J. H. Crider Co., Philadelphia.)

John Crider is a nice-looking, aggressive young member of the Washington Bureau of the New York Times. His 373-page work on the bureaucrat is calculated to be definitive, last word on the subject.

First of all, Mr. Crider avers that the bureaucrat defies precise identification. The old type of bureaucrat, says he, was a Government official who loved red tape, worshiped routine and was scared to death of new ideas. But while this species still swarms through the nation's capital, it is another, new variety which has concerned us most of all.

"This" (it says here in the book) "is the heaven-sent bureaucratic zealot who enters the Government service conscious of the great mission to which he has been called. He was first observed during the New Deal '30s as the bright young man who burned the midnight oil thinking up new 'services' for the public, and buzzed around Government offices all day obtaining support for the products of his brain."

According to the Crider definition, then, the "bureaucrat" is the Government employee with a passion for serving the public, and with the feeling that he has been called to perform a "great mission." This is indeed a horrific indictment. Clearly, this means that Crider recognizes the only true servant of the people as one filled with ennui toward his job.

But wait—this becomes very confusing. For on page 31 Mr. Crider finds just such languorous loafers on the public payroll, and he doesn't like them one mite. Says he indignantly: "Just walk through the miles of corridors in the Department of Commerce Building some spring afternoon when the doors are wide open. The principal bureaucrats themselves are probably behind closed doors, most likely 'in conference,' which may mean that they are napping, reading a novel, listening to a radio or bulling with neighboring bureaucrats about how the Redskins made out in their football season." The secretaries and typists lounge around smoking cigarettes, inspecting their new hair-dos or discussing last night's dates, he adds.

Obviously, it is hard to satisfy Mr. Crider. He doesn't want them burning the midnight oil with zeal, yet he fidgets when they puff a weed or inspect a hair-do.

Both notions, of course, are out of focus. (Incidentally, the only persons whom I've seen napping in Government buildings were newsmen in press rooms. Crider's book unwittingly confirms a suspicion: that "bureaucrat" as now used is chiefly a political smear-word; and that if "bureaucracy" means "red tape," as commonly understood, then you may find it everywhere in some measure—perhaps even in the Washington Bureau of the New York Times.

The Churches vs. the Nazis

Hitler and his followers swiftly put down all open opposition in every country (including Germany) that they have conquered, but with one exception: the churches, both Protestant and Catholic. This moral resistance to tyranny is an inspiring passage in a decade's gloomy history of Europe, and it is the subject of two new books.

In "Christian Counter-Attack" (Scribner's) the fight that they have conquered, in country after country, by Hugh Martin, Douglas Newton, H. M. Waddams and R. R. Williams. "The Church and the War" (Macmillan) is a letter to American Christians by Karl Barth, the Swiss theologian, who has inspired many in the occupied areas to fight on for religious liberty.

DOROTHY THOMPSON

Are We Prepared for Victory?

THE nearer we come to Germany, the less we seem concerned with what is happening inside Germany. Our official attitude is that the problem will be solved by purely military means—by occupation. Three armies will march into assigned areas, or the areas will assign themselves by the movement of our three armies, and the country will be taken over.

At this point, the three Allied governments and their armies will face a problem unprecedented in the history of the world. They will enter a country in complete collapse, without a government or administration that can be used, and as far as any of us know—without a policy regarding what we hope to create in Germany.

A Problem of Administration.

Our avowed immediate purpose is to liquidate Nazism and punish war criminals. That automatically throws out practically the whole administration, central and local.

Now, however one draws the frontiers of Germany, it is an area containing 60 to 80 million people, highly organized, centrally administered, deeply bureaucratized and living in a narrow space, a fact which in itself demands a high degree of integrated administration.

It is industrial, not agricultural, already demoralized by bombing and shifts of population, and containing 10 to 12 million foreign workers. It is viciouly cannibalized by Americans, Russians and Britons, without the aid of thousands of Germans. But what Germans?

Our Allies in Germany.

Presuming foresight of the situation that is now looming upon us, we would have been in contact with such people, giving them every aid. That they exist has been proved from the type of government the Nazis have set up; otherwise, there would not have been so terrific a control over the home front.

In the last month, we have had proof of it in the which involved high-ranking officers of the General Staff, as well as many civilians. Dr. Karl Goerdeler, for instance, was an active, plotting anti-Nazi since the early days of the Hitler regime, and his connections were not only with part of the Reichswehr, but with the old Social Democrats and trades unions. How strong he may have been, I do not know. But the conspiracy existed, and could have been strengthened.

There are all sorts of symptoms that anti-Nazi made overtures to the Allied powers and tried to get aid in overthrowing the Nazi regime, both before and since the war began. As far as we can see, they failed completely; the plot was discovered and its leaders liquidated by the Gestapo.

Who Will Surrender?

In the days of the plot, the attitude expressed by inspired American publicists was: We will not be checked out of our victory; we demand unconditional surrender. But that is not the question. The question is: Who is going to surrender? And what will come after the surrender?

Actually, the unconditional surrender formula is in the waste paper basket. Surrender implies authority that can and will surrender. The Nazis will not.

The French Fascists have not even surrendered in Paris and Marseille. They have had to be dislodged house by house, and could be dislodged only by Frenchmen, because we don't know who they are or where they are. It is unlikely that the German Nazis will show less fight than the French Fascists—but what Germans are going to help us?

The Russians have a German group that will help liquidate Nazism. But we have not. The reason is not that there are more pro-Russian Germans than pro-Western. The reason is that the Germans consciously foresaw a situation.

France a Mere Picnic.

The situation we have met in France has astonished at least our correspondents. It is a revolution, not a war. It is an organized revolution, with its partisans assisted by our arms, the majority of the people with it and with a personnel to conduct it. It is a Sunday school picnic compared with what we will confront one of these days in Germany.

Germany is not only the most powerful center of Fascism, but the last stronghold of all the Fascists of Europe. And for whatever policy we pursue—the breakup of Germany, the truncating of Germany without division—for any choice, we shall have to have assistance.

Are we doing anything to encourage and organize such assistance? Do we know yet what policy we shall seek assistance for? Or are we doing all we can to bring about the discouragement and liquidation of any group that might help us?

Confusion on Postwar Legislation

IT'S hard to understand the attitude of the men and women on Capitol Hill who are carpentering the legislation so vital for the period immediately following the end of hostilities.

The Senate passed a demobilization-unemployment compensation bill that was in many respects woefully inadequate. It was rigid and arbitrary in many of its provisions.

That was the Senate, the traditionally conservative Senate. Now, what is the House doing? The House, the liberal second chamber, with its mass representation as our forefathers saw it, has chipped away the Senate's George bill until it would hardly serve as an economic umbrella in normal times.

Not an Election Issue.

At first, you might think it had something to do with getting elected. After all, that November date is not so far off. But I believe it goes deeper than that.

It goes back to a kind of thinking which apparently has persisted in spite of all the bitter economic lessons of the last 15 years. Men like Representative Knutson of Minnesota, who talks about "the gimmies," and Representative Sumners of Texas, who talks about the huge debt, sum it up.

Back of it is the suspicion—yes, almost the conviction—that most people are malingerers, lazy; they'd rather live on a Government handout than take an honest job of hard work.

Majority Want to Work.

At the very start of the years of mass unemployment, a thorough investigation by capable people was made of the attitude of the men and women suddenly thrown out on the street through no fault of their own. The result was published in one of the most moving books I've ever read, called "Some Folks Won't Work," by Clifton Calkins, showing the one thing they wanted was a chance to earn a decent living.

Of course, there may be backwaters where the pay has been so low that men would rather go fishing and take a Government dole. There's a fringe of "unemployables," but this is small. Look what happened when the war boom gave people a chance at jobs.

MAJ. H. C. ACKERT GETS
NEW AIR FORCE POST

Home After 15 Months in England—Bellevue Flyer Downs Nazi Plane.

Supply and maintenance problems for the Eighth Air Force in England virtually have been eliminated, Maj. Harold C. Ackert, former St. Louis lawyer, who has been serving with the Flying Fortress group in England, said today.

Maj. Ackert returned to St. Louis Aug. 13, and will leave tomorrow for a new assignment involving renegotiation and termination of war contracts. He served as supply and maintenance officer for a bombardment division of the Eighth Air Force for 15 months, and in addition handled defense work in nearly 50 courts martial in England and Ireland. For the latter work, which was voluntary, he was given a commendation by Maj. Gen. E. J. Partridge, division commander. Maj. Staff Sgt. Rudy York, son of Mrs. Julia York, 1115A South Taylor avenue, has completed his fourth mission in the Mediterranean area, another dispatch stated. He is an engineer-gunner in a B-25 Mitchell bomber, and has recently served as bombardier because of a shortage in the squadron. He attended Webster High School and Hadley Vocational School. ROOSEVELT LETTER URGES
PUERTO RICO HOME RULE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—President Roosevelt, urging House passage of the Senate Puerto Rico home rule bill, asserted in a letter made public yesterday that, although the island people "have long since reached political maturity," they now have "only the rudiments of democracy."

The letter, under-date of Aug. 29, was sent to Chairman Bell (Dem.), Missouri, of the Insular Affairs Committee.

The measure provides for popular election of the Governor, now appointed by the President, and empowers the Governor to select other appointive officials, who now are Federal appointees.

House members said that, under an agreement between the majority and minority, no controversial legislation is likely to come up between now and election and that immediate action on the bill is unlikely.

New Kind of Face Powder
Makes Her Look Years Younger!

ONCE this lovely girl looked quite a bit older. Some people actually thought she was rapidly approaching middle age . . .

For she was the innocent victim of an unflattering face powder! It was such an unkind powder—treacherous and sly. It showed up every tiny line in her face—accented every little skin fault—even seemed to exaggerate the size of her pores.

But look at her now! Can you guess her age? Would you say she is 20-30-35?

At last she has found a face powder that really flatters her skin—makes it look younger and more enchanting!

Why Lady Esther Face Powder Is So Flattering
Lady Esther Face Powder is extra flattering because it's made differently. It isn't just mixed, just sifted, in the usual way. It's blown by Twin Hurricanes—blended with the speed and power of hurricanes—to look clearer, smoother and more flattering on your skin!

Because of this patented, exclusive method of hurricane blending, the texture of Lady Esther Face Powder is much smoother and finer than ordinary powder. The first touch of your puff spreads a delicate film of beauty on your skin, hiding little lines, little blemishes. And Lady Esther Face Powder clings longer, too—clings four long hours!

But the most exciting difference is in the shades. Lady Esther shades have a subtle new quality—because the color is blown in by hurricanes. Many women say that the Lady Esther shades are so fresh and alive that ordinary powder shades seem dull and drab by comparison.

Living Proof—
In Your Own Mirror!
Just try Lady Esther Face Powder! Try it on one side of your face—and on the other, apply your usual make-up. Then compare—for looks, for texture, for shade! Does Lady Esther Face Powder make your skin look smoother, younger? YOU be the judge! No matter what you paid for your present face powder—even if you paid $10.00 or more—you'll find that Lady Esther Face Powder makes you look more beautiful!

Muncrief's Return Expected to Help Browns in Final Pennant Drive

St. Louis Out of Lead For First Time Since Taking Over on June 1

By W. J. McGoogan

SECOND PLACE, American League, Sept. 5.—From this rather unfamiliar spot Manager Luke Sewell and his Browns today are wondering how they can climb back to the top rung, a place they held continuously, undisputed, from June 1 until yesterday.

They see something of a bright ray of hope, too, because Bob Muncrief, pitched an inning against the Cleveland Indians during the even break yesterday and appeared to be something like his effective self.

He told Sewell after he had pitched off three successive Cleveland batters that his arm still hurt some but felt better than it had for a long time.

So Sewell declared he would use Bob in the coming series in Chicago which opens Thursday night and concludes Sunday with a doubleheader, five games in all, which will finish the Browns on the road this season. After the series, they return home to entertain the White Sox in the four eastern clubs in 17 games at Sportsman's Park.

They'll Come Back. Sewell said there was no reason for the team to be downhearted that he feels the Browns will get back on the right track and regain the lead during the home stand which will find the Yankees, now a half-game ahead of the Browns, playing 19 games on the road where they have not been strong.

The following table of the four contenders shows what each will have to do for the remainder of the season.

Team W. L. W. % W. to Play Home Away

New York — 74 59 21 2 19
Browns — 73 60 21 2 19
Detroit — 70 64 21 2 18
Cleveland — 69 65 21 2 17

New York's comeback, of course, has been nothing short of sensational. Since the Browns trimmed them three out of four at the Yankee Stadium, the club has won 26 of 26 contests. When the Browns left New York Aug. 12, the Yankees were in fourth place, nine and one-half games behind the leaders. This means they have made up 10 games since that time.

Even so, the Browns have made up the club they have to beat because the Tigers also finish at home.

The Browns are two games ahead of the Tigers and two and one-half in front of the fourth place Red Sox who, like the Yankees, finish on the road, and are not considered serious threats.

It's Up to Pitchers. Muncrief has not pitched a complete game since July 30 and the big fellow's drive in the fifth inning so much strain on the rest of the staff that the strongest department of the club all summer has been missing fire. That's the reason for the failure of the team in recent weeks, during which the Browns have dropped from a top of a seven-game lead to second place, a half-game behind New York. Since their 10-game winning streak was broken by the Yankees in New York, they have won nine games while losing 17.

Along with the pitching weakness, the team developed a hitting slump and has not pulled out of it completely, but one thing the Browns have shown before this season has been courage, and now it is the time they will have to call upon all they have, if they hope to finish on top.

They broke even in two games with Cleveland in the Labor day doubleheader, losing the first 6 to 4 and taking the second 5 to 1. And while they were doing that the Yankees won twice from the Athletics, both shutouts, to move to the top.

The Browns had plenty of chances to win the opener from Mel Harder but the necessary hit was always lacking.

Fall to Hold Lead. At that, Jack Jakucki had a three-run lead going in the fifth inning, but the Indians bunched four hits for four runs, the big blow being Roy Cullenbine's sixteenth home run of the season with two mates on bases.

After that, Al Hollingsworth pitched through the eighth and in that inning yielded two more runs on two singles and a double. It was the last half of that inning that the Browns missed their big opportunity. Harder walked three men to fill the bases, with two out, and Stephens rolled a single through the box to score one of them. Heaving was called in then to pitch to McQuinn and George forced Stephens at second for the final out.

Muncrief pitched to Hockett, Boudreau and Cullenbine in the ninth and got them all on fly balls, but the Browns couldn't do anything more with Heving.

Nelson Potter pitched nice ball to gain his 14th decision in the closing game, while the Browns collected nine safeties off the Indian pitching. Stephens bunt in the 17th home run in the first inning after Zarilla had singled with two out and after that Potter had the game in hand all the way.

BROWNE NOTES. Attendance was 17,808, including 17,140 paid, the largest number to pay to see a Brown's day game here this season.

One of the most humorous incidents you ever saw in a big league game occurred in the second. Calvert, the third Indian pitcher, fielded Stephens' bunt in the eighth inning, intended for a sacrifice. Rocco, the Indians' first baseman, had rushed in close to the plate, but knelt down to give Calvert a clear field to throw to Mack on first. Instead Calvert drew a careful head and hit Rocco on the shoulder with the ball.

Umpire George Piggars, behind the plate, had difficulties satisfying the teams with balls and strikes.

WALLY'S COLUMN

Seven Clubs Hope the Browns Lose.

PLAYERS of seven major league teams, possibly 11 minor league club owners, two league presidents and the fans of several big league cities are giving the Browns the silent I-hope-you-lose treatment. . . . And you can toss into the group of hostile fans the country's baseball writers.

Various reasons for not wanting the St. Louis American League team to win its first pennant in 43 seasons of membership in the organization. . . . The players of the seven antagonistic clubs are interested economically. . . . They comprise the first division teams of both leagues. . . . The players figure that an all-St. Louis series would yield the least financial return for the world series players' pool.

Eight clubs get a cut of this sum. . . . With Detroit or New York as the American League winner, receipts for the first four games in which the players share would be considerably larger than if the Browns won. . . . That's because the Detroit and New York parks seat many thousands more than Sportsman's Park.

Financial Difference Will Amount to Little. THE players, probably, are not worried too much about what they'll lose if the Browns win the pennant.

The situation this season is different from last year's championship, when each winning team player received $8100.

This was due to the fact that the first three games of the series were played in Yankee Stadium, with its huge seating capacity. This time, the first three games are to be played at Sportsman's Park, with only one big crowd at New York going toward the players' pool.

The difference last year between the New York and the Sportsman's Park contribution to the players' pool for a single game was only $50,148.96.

And that would make a difference of around $500 to each player of the winning World Series club. It would be still less if Detroit were the opposing team.

Objections by league officials are based on the belief that a one-city world series is not in the best interest of baseball generally. . . . They believe, and probably correctly, that a battle between teams representing different sections of the country arouses a keener national interest than one between teams from the same city.

That is also the prevailing baseball view of all officialdom, major and minor. . . . The writers, too, are in the latter camp when two cities are involved.

In the past there have been several instances of one-city world series, New York having held five and Chicago one. These occurred in communities of large area populations.

Parker Beats Talbert For U. S. Tennis Title FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 5 (AP).—It took Frankie Parker 13 years to win the most important of all American tennis championships, but not that he has captured the men's singles title.

Frankie can boast that he's the only player who ever won all the major events.

Starting in 1931 when he won the National boy's title, Parker, now an Army sergeant stationed at Muroc Field in the California desert, became junior champion, outdoors and indoors, clay courts champion, national indoor champion and men's doubles champion.

Parker figured this was his year to win and he came through according to his expectations, sweeping past Billy Talbert, the Indianapolis electronics expert, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3, in yesterday's final after he had disposed of the 1940 champion, L. Don McNeill of the Navy, in the semifinal round.

The doubles title went to Talbert and Segura. All the other crowns remained in the hands of the 1943 winners, Pauline Betz of Los Angeles took the women's title for the third time Sunday. Margaret Osborne of San Francisco, singles runner-up, teamed with Louise Brough of Santa Monica, Cal., to retain the women's doubles title, and with Talbert to keep the mixed doubles crown yesterday.

The Osborne-Brough team defeated Miss Betz and Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 and Miss Osborne and Talbert, 6-3, 6-2, in the final.

ney, defeating Richard Kobusch and Mrs. John L. Gardner, both of St. Louis, 7-5, 7-5.

WILLIAM J. ULLERTON JR., Associated Press columnist: "It may be an exciting American League 'race' to some folks, but from here the progress of the Browns, Yankees and Red Sox looks more like a quartet of drunks going down the street, their arms around one another's shoulders, trying their best to keep from staggering off the sidewalk."

player of the winning World Series club. It would be still less if Detroit were the opposing team.

Objections by league officials are based on the belief that a one-city world series is not in the best interest of baseball generally. . . . They believe, and probably correctly, that a battle between teams representing different sections of the country arouses a keener national interest than one between teams from the same city.

That is also the prevailing baseball view of all officialdom, major and minor. . . . The writers, too, are in the latter camp when two cities are involved.

In the past there have been several instances of one-city world series, New York having held five and Chicago one. These occurred in communities of large area populations.

Parker Beats Talbert For U. S. Tennis Title FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 5 (AP).—It took Frankie Parker 13 years to win the most important of all American tennis championships, but not that he has captured the men's singles title.

Frankie can boast that he's the only player who ever won all the major events.

Starting in 1931 when he won the National boy's title, Parker, now an Army sergeant stationed at Muroc Field in the California desert, became junior champion, outdoors and indoors, clay courts champion, national indoor champion and men's doubles champion.

Parker figured this was his year to win and he came through according to his expectations, sweeping past Billy Talbert, the Indianapolis electronics expert, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3, in yesterday's final after he had disposed of the 1940 champion, L. Don McNeill of the Navy, in the semifinal round.

The doubles title went to Talbert and Segura. All the other crowns remained in the hands of the 1943 winners, Pauline Betz of Los Angeles took the women's title for the third time Sunday. Margaret Osborne of San Francisco, singles runner-up, teamed with Louise Brough of Santa Monica, Cal., to retain the women's doubles title, and with Talbert to keep the mixed doubles crown yesterday.

The Osborne-Brough team defeated Miss Betz and Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 and Miss Osborne and Talbert, 6-3, 6-2, in the final.

Overlin, recently discharged from the United States Navy, successfully opened a comeback campaign last week in Santa Rosa, Cal.

Chicago Wins Cricket Series By 2-1 Margin

Excellent batting by Arthur Tindall and Frank Hodgkinson enabled the Chicago cricket team to defeat the St. Louis eleven in two of the three matches contested here over the weekend, the final being won by the visitors yesterday afternoon, 125-106. The contests took place on the Forest Park cricket field, opposite the Fieldhouse.

The local squad won the opening match last Saturday, 151 to 59, but lost Sunday, 142-85. Hodgkinson was credited with 53 of Chicago's runs, while C. P. Cummins made 23 of St. Louis' 95 runs.

Tindall set the pace yesterday for Chicago, accumulating 28 runs early in the match. Hodgkinson had 26. Both of these players also served as bowlers, or pitchers, Tindall was nicked for 27 runs and Hodgkinson 12.

Frank Saunders made a good start at the wickets for the St. Louis squad in the final, making 26 runs to take the individual honors. Bill Flowers, who was next in line with his 25 runs, performed well while batting but frequently had to have a pinch runner.

P. O. (A) William J. Bailey, member of the British Fleet Air Arm from London, Eng., played on the St. Louis team during the three matches but had little success until yesterday. Bailey, who leaves from Lambert Field shortly, came through with 12 runs and allowed only 13 Chicago runs while serving as a bowler. George Heppner and Cummins each were nicked for 47 Chicago runs.

A. D. WELSH CHOSEN STATE LEGION CHIEF

St. Louisan Takes Top Office—Veterans Back Post-war Military Training.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 5 (AP)—A. D. (Bud) Welsh, a Marine in the 1917-18 World War and now a baby buggy manufacturer in St. Louis, is the new commander of the American Legion in Missouri, with L. I. Morris of Lexington in line to succeed him next year.

Morris was elected senior vice commander in the closing session of the state convention yesterday when Welsh was elevated from vice commander to the top office in accord with a three-year-old Legion practice.

The Legionnaires adopted resolutions advocating peacetime military training of American youth to prevent future wars and urged opening of Legion ranks to admit service men still engaged in the current war.

They found backing for their military training program from Warren Atherton, national commander, who also urged them to support "an international organization backed by sufficient power to maintain the peace."

However, C. C. Sprout of Hannibal protested against peacetime military training as "a program of militarism such as we are now fighting to destroy."

Fresh from a tour of the Pacific war front, Atherton predicted "American troops will be in Tokyo within a year after the finish of the fighting in Europe."

Martin V. Coffey of Ohio, national vice commander, warned "if you let Hitler win a negotiated peace, you'll just as well start training your grandson for the next war."

The convention also adopted resolutions urging sale of Missouri land now occupied by Army posts and war plants to war veterans in family size units and asking for creation of a 15-member board of veterans to direct the work of the state service office.

Mrs. James M. McCombs of Kansas City was elected president of the Women's Auxiliary and Fred Carlton of Chillicothe grand chef de gare of the funmaking organization, 40 and 8.

Other legion officers included: Dr. Ben Jolly of Moberly, John Brooks of Sedalia, John Morrison of Richmond Heights, Robert Henderson of Jackson and William F. Jackson of St. Louis as division vice commanders; Irwin Walker, St. Louis, Judge Advocate, and Nat Dunn, St. Louis County, sergeant at arms.

COL. CLYDE H. MORGAN NEW ST. LOUIS ORDNANCE HEAD

Col. Clyde H. Morgan has been appointed district chief of the St. Louis Ordnance District, succeeding Russell E. Gardner, Jr., who has resigned, it was announced today.

An artilleryman during World War I, Col. Morgan transferred to ordnance in 1921 and beginning in 1939 served a five-year assignment as chief, ordnance aircraft service, at Wright Field, Dayton, O. During this period, American aircraft armament, which had been lagging, was brought to its present state of superiority. An outstanding result of his work was the adaptation of the 75-mm. cannon to B-25 medium bombers.

Col. Morgan, a native of Ohio, is a graduate of the United States Military Academy, the Army Industrial College, the Army and Navy College, and the University of Pennsylvania. He will make his home here with his wife and daughter, Marilyn, Gardner, who continues as deputy chief on an advisory basis and will assist in administration of the ordnance procurement program.

TAVERN OPERATOR FIRES AT MAN, HITS TWO OTHERS

Two Negro bystanders suffered minor gunshot wounds yesterday when struck by a wild shot fired by Isaac Foster, Negro operator of a tavern at 346 Chicago avenue, Meacham Park, when a customer refused to pay for a drink.

Foster said a Negro known only as "Kingfish" invited a bottle of beer and told him he had no money, adding "Shoot me if you want to." Foster said he fired once with a shotgun, missing Kingfish but striking Antoine Bailey and Alex White, both residents of Meacham Park. They were hospitalized after treatment for leg wounds. Foster was arrested and placed under bond.

Coleman Stove Co., in Wichita, Kan., were very pleased. It made them feel that they were doing something worthwhile for the war. So in appreciation they decided to make up a special stove as a gift for me.

We kept hearing about it over here for weeks, and waited for it the way children wait for Christmas. The other correspondents were as excited about it as I was.

At last it came. Boy, you should see it. It is an exact duplicate of the regular stove except that this one is all handmade and chromium plated and has my name engraved on it, like a loving cup.

One of the correspondents said, "You can't light that, it's too pretty."

An Army Colonel said, "They should have sent a fireplace and a mantel along for you to exhibit it on."

Lighting Delayed.

FOR days there was a line of soldiers and correspondents at my tent wanting to see the stove. Twice we got ready to light it while photographers took pictures, but at the last minute we couldn't bear to, and put it away. The boys all kidded me and said they bet I never would light it.

Necessity finally drove me to it. That was in Paris. I had given my old stove to a friend, thinking I wouldn't need one any more. But the eating situation in Paris was drastic at first, and we had only the rations we brought with us individually.

So at last I had to break down and light my stove in a hotel room in Paris. Some of the boys had joked and said it was so beautiful it probably wouldn't work. But it did. It practically melted the hotel walls down.

So to all of you who had a hand in the stove, my thanks and gratitude. But if this keeps up I'll have to be careful about admiring in

Foreign Trade Opportunities . . . Right Next Door

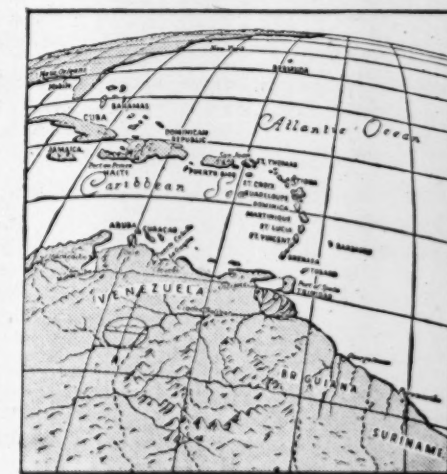

Practically next door, among the beautiful Caribbean islands, Venezuela and the Guianas, are millions of friendly neighbors who want to buy many millions of dollars' worth of American goods of all kinds. In return they have valuable tropical products to benefit our U. S. economy.

The Alcoa Line has served the people in this area for many years. We have learned the kinds of merchandise they want, and the products they have for us. Before war limited normal trade, some parts of this market took larger quantities of cargo than others, as is the case with any sales territory. But the Alcoa fleet gave the same good service everywhere—even to ports where cargo is handled in lighters, as pictured above.

Life in Paris

A Little Publicity For a Great Artist

By Robert J. Casey

Via Press Wireless—The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch. Copyright, 1944.

PARIS, Aug. 29 (Delayed).

THE MANAGER of a certain hotel where foreign correspondents hang out said that Paris was just a little stunned but would presently be normal again. "The people have great resilience," he said. "They will be getting back to normal life just as quickly as they can." And in about five minutes, it turned out that he was right. Some people, who apparently aren't in any hurry to get back to normal, spend a lot of time out in front of the hotel watching correspondents getting in and out of jeeps. Apparently, it is a relaxing sight in a town where automobiles have been virtually nonexistent for four years. The populace exchanges pleasantries with the visitors for hours at a time. So it was no surprise when Monsieur Maurice Journet joined the group and opened conversation without wasting time for introductions.

"WOULD MONSIEUR JOIN ME in a cup of coffee?" he asked. "There is a spot around the corner where the coffee is no worse than other places and it would give me great pleasure to have Monsieur as my guest."

So Monsieur said, "Okay," and we went around the corner to a highly polished bistro, where a few early customers were returning to normal by drinking coffee, as advertised, and some anonymous variety of Alsatian wine.

Monsieur Journet seemed affluent and was a pleasant and openhanded host. But even so there was something a little touching about the incident. Thirty-five cents is a lot of money to spend on that kind of coffee.

MONSIEUR, WHILE CARRYING on light conversation in his own personal French, wondered why the wistful Journet should have selected him for entertainment. After a while he began to get a little inkling. "That is why I am interested in writers and other people connected with the arts. It is formidable to be a war correspondent and maybe Monsieur has been to Hollywood?" He pronounced Hollywood with a definite French twist, so that it sounded like "olive oil." And it took a little time to make sense out of that portion of the conversation. Eventually, Monsieur said that he had many friends in Olive Oil and the discussion got going again.

"I am too an artist," he said, a little sadly, "but I have never been to Olive Oil. However, it is very nice in Paris where the artists can sit on terraces under the plane trees in the morning and sip their coffee, or maybe a little later sip an aperitif. There are compensations, Monsieur, and then, too, one doesn't have to go to Hollywood or Olive Oil. I could go to London or to some of the big cities of the United States."

MONSIEUR SAID THAT he quite understood. Art must have expression somewhere—it seemed rather obvious that art in France had been sadly repressed under the German regime. When Journet spoke again, he seemed to be echoing the hotel manager.

"It will be better now," he said. "Things will be normal again and perhaps Monsieur might say a word about a fellow artist to help speed that glad day." Well, there it was. Monsieur became more interested.

It seemed about the time to find out just what sort of an artist Journet might be.

"ARE YOU A MUSICIAN?" he asked. His host shook his head.

"No, Monsieur," he said. "I am a strong man—very, very strong and it is for that I hope that maybe you can get me some helpful publicity. Everybody knows me in Paris, but I am not so well known in England and the United States. Once I carried a horse up the steps of Sacre Coeur De Montmartre, which is a big church and has many steps—voilà! And with that, like a magician performing hat tricks, he whipped a picture out of the briefcase under his arm and presented it. "You will see what I mean," he said.

SO MONSIEUR SAID he was glad to do a little favor like writing a publicity plug in a cause so worthy. He reminded himself, that if Paris didn't get liberated from the Germans every day, well, people didn't go carrying horses up the steps of Sacre Coeur every day, either. So here it is. If you have any churches that you want to have horses carted up the steps of, drop a line to Maurice Journet at 11 Bis Rue Des Recoillets, Paris. You'll probably have to furnish your own horse.

BROADWAY

HOLLYWOODIA: The cashier at one of the zingiest night-life saloons is the president of the Parent-Teachers Association in her son's school. . . . Marc Connolly, the playwright, can't keep away from Mary Zavian. Stuart Holmes, a top-ranker in the silents, is playing a juror in "The Missing Juror"—and not the missing one. . . . A woman has been posing around as Mrs. Humphrey Bogart, showing his picture in her locker; Mrs. Bogart is so well known in Hollywood that the impostor got a lot of ha-ha. . . . Director Mike Curtiz, who wants what he wants his way, and says it his way, shouted at Roz Russell: "Get more dignity in your nose—and your shoulders make more aloof!"

THE CASH REGISTERS in the gyp-joints are jingling; the ticket-racks for the hit shows are as bare as Hitler's future—the buyers are in town! Twice a year they descend on Manhattan in volume, and then come the glad, gala days for Broadway. Even now, in a lopsided seller's market, buyers must be entertained. It's a tradition. . . . Johnny O'Connor this week starts his 17th year as manager of Fred Waring—never a word in writing between them, only a hand-shake. . . . As soon as the ships can make it, there will be a flood of real champagne pouring in. The thrifty and cagey French have been secretly making it, bottling it and hiding it all the time. . . . CASE RECORDS

By Dr. George W. Crane

CASE D-24: Ireta T, aged 18, is secretary of a girls' club. While I seldom employ a letter from readers in this column, today I shall make an exception and quote her missive. "We have a club of 12 girls," her letter began, "and all of us are either 17 or 18 years of age. We are in need of some good advice and after much discussion at our last meeting, we picked you as the most reliable source. Before I describe our problems, I should tell you about our home life. We all come from very respectable and religious homes, and our families are the old-fashioned type. They think we are too young to know about the facts of life. And nobody at school ever gave us any specific help, so we are hoping you will furnish us some pointers."

"WHEN WE HAVE OUR meetings, we discuss these things, but we lack the specific facts. We have boy friends and some of us may be married before the year is over, but we feel totally unprepared to face the problems of marriage. Therefore, we hoped you'd understand, and we'd appreciate any pamphlet that you might send us. We shall be very grateful, Dr. Crane, for any help you may give us. We plan to discuss your materials at our next club meeting."

"OR WHAT MAN IS THERE of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?" Jesus believed in giving people the vital facts for happy and successful living. Certainly a group of young women aged 17 and 18, are entitled to the scientific "bread" which they crave for preparing themselves for successful marriage and motherhood. Yet, here in 1944, in one of our most progressive states, a group of such young women write for advice on the simple facts of sex, because their parents and their schools and their churches have ignored the subject or evaded it. "The truth shall set you free," exclaimed Jesus. Ignorance and the prudish hiding of essential information only promote juvenile delinquency, disease and immorality. Most of our young people don't consciously seek to be bad. They don't want to do wrong. And when they marry, they don't wish to end in the divorce court within six months to a year. They want to do right and be happy and live devoted lives. But when the adult generation gives them an intellectual "stone" when they hungrily cry for mental "bread," who is to blame for their later mistakes?

The Curative Qualities of Being Happy

By

Logan Clendening, M. D.

MY old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, has been spending a week with me fishing, and in moments of relaxation from that absorbing vocation he has expounded some of his philosophy. "I don't know whether it has got a good five cent cigar yet," he remarked the other evening, "but one thing this country needs is for the inhabitants to realize how happy they are."

"If you have any idea that they do realize it, you must know an entirely different kind and set of people than my patients, because that realization has not permeated to them."

"Modern people are happy in the sense that they are not miserable, but they do not often enough face the acute and clear realization of their happiness. They do not pause and let their happiness surge over them."

"IN THE FIRST PLACE, they take too many things for granted. And, in the second place, they let too many details harass them."

"The every day sources of happiness we take for granted make up a pitiful waste. Here the poet, the man of art, the temperamental one, has the advantage of us. I saw a musician of my acquaintance in the street looking at a billboard advertising display on a billboard. All he could say when I braced him was—'Isn't that perfectly beautiful?—over and over again. And I was, when you stopped to look at it, though I had passed it twice at it with no more thought than—'Oh! Just another sign!'"

We take for granted all the genius spread before us daily.

"A citizen of Princeton told me that when Einstein came there to live, he used to walk every day, and fascinate through the five and ten cent store, shopping and gazing long in sheer happiness at the counters covered with their wares. The modern world spreads before us a free show and we accept it dumbly, with less appreciation than the denizen of the middle ages did his drab surroundings. Do you remember when you first visited a new city—New York, London, Paris—how for a week, the mere sight of the streets excited you? Or the first days of your vacation—the river, the sea-shore—did the same thing. Then you got used to it. We have been born kings in a fairland and we have all abated."

"THE ONLY FORM of psychotherapy I ever practiced on my patients was to teach them to will happiness. Every doctor has to have some kind of psychotherapy whether it is used by him consciously or unconsciously. Some give vitamins: I taught them to will happiness to themselves. It cured many a case of chronic appendicitis and endocrine disorder, I can tell you. You just make them sit still and think a while of all their blessings, thrust the troubles aside, and by will power, a surge of happiness fill their minds."

"It sounds trite and Pollyannaish, but it has foundations. The trouble is we let details swamp our happiness. I found my wife, poor wretch, who has every reason to be happy, running herself into a gloom the other day because something hadn't come back from the cleaners. I know old guys sitting around, listening to their arteries hardening. They are afraid of one thing will get so hard the blood won't go through. It hasn't happened to them yet, but that doesn't stop them worrying."

"Being on the shady side of 70 I am grateful I still have my hearing and my eyesight. That is enough for me to obey the dear old canticle—'Lift up your hearts.'"

He can, too.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS A. R.: Is there any treatment for arthritic fibrillation besides digitalis?

Answer: Digitalis is the heaven sent specific for the condition, but rest and light diet are necessary adjuncts.

M. C. L.: As a child I had a small goiter. Now at 35, following the birth of my child, my neck is enlarged, and my basal metabolism is 114.

Answer: Pregnancy causes the thyroid gland to swell in response to extra nutritional demands. The basal metabolism, however, is a little too high for complacency. I would advocate waiting and see how after a year things are.

For Beautiful Teeth

By Patricia Lindsay

YOUNG girls, particularly, are likely to think of their facial beauty as consisting of a beautiful complexion and lovely eyes. They forget that teeth are a vital factor of one's beauty. Neglected teeth can ruin all facial beauty and, believe it or not, good teeth can be planned. Nature does a beautiful job of good teeth, but you must provide the materials for their nourishment and arrange for their proper upkeep.

First of all, good teeth need these foods. See that you eat them every week. Milk for calcium, phosphorus and vitamin A. Tomatoes, fresh oranges and lemons and grapefruit for vitamin C. Egg yolks, cod liver and halibut liver preparations for vitamin D when you do not get enough of sunshine. Other fruits, meat, cheese, eggs, whole-grain cereals, breads and fish in normal quantities.

A Good Beginning

By Angelo Patri

IN training children it is best to begin as you want to end, that is, teach the child at the start what he is to do, how he is to do it and when the knowledge is to be used. The first experiences are the most lasting.

When, for example, it is time to teach a child not to cross the street or to stay inside a set line, take time off to teach him what you mean. It means preparation for this lesson must be made ahead so that the necessary time may be given to this important matter.

When the time is set, go with the child and stay with him for the time he is to remain outdoors. Show him how far he can go and tell him briefly, the fewer words the better, what you want him to do. Sit by, then, and watch and every time he strays toward the edge of the yard call him back.

Stay on the task day after day, the same time daily, and he will master the idea soon. But remember to stay on the scene. Telling won't do because little children learn by experience and not by ear.

This principle of learning must be observed by the teacher as well as the parent. The first day in class must be given over largely to the mechanics of the classroom. The method of distributing material, caring for wraps and belongings, classroom routine, all must be set the way they are to be for the term. If this is well done the first day, the rest of the term will be comparatively easy. Children do what is expected of them if the standard is set clearly.

Much of children's disorder and disobedience not all of course, is caused by our own slipshod method of doing things. We are all busy and think our work too important to be held up by a child's waywardness but when we get down to facts, the most important task we face is that of rearing the children the best way possible.

The dishes can wait, the fussy dessert can wait too; so can the office report and the arrangement of the shelves. The children must be attended to first and in the right way. A bit of time set aside at the start is bound to save a deal of waste effort and time later. Begin the way you hope to end.

More light on the different problems of child raising is offered by Dr. Patri in his illuminating booklet, No. 304, "Your Child and Other People," obtainable by sending 10 cents (coin preferred) and a 3-cent stamp to him, care this paper, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

STATE SUPREME COURT CLEARS ITS DOCKET FIRST TIME
By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 5.—The Missouri Supreme Court, for the first time in its history, has completely cleared its docket, Chief Justice James M. Douglas announced today.

He said opinions had been written and handed down in every case under submission, and that all pending appeals which had been filed in time for the September term had been docketed for hearing in that term, which opened today.

"This means that there are no cases accumulated in the Judges' desks," Chief Justice Douglas said. "Every case awaiting argument has been set down for hearing. This means there is no logjam of cases in the clerk's office. The only cases on file and not set for hearing are those which reached this court after the docket for the September term was published."

This clearing of the dockets, and the accompanying expedition in disposition of appeals, is due in part to accelerated work of the court and in part to some lessening of appeal litigation in wartime.

On one previous occasion, in 1939, when Chief Justice M. Tipton was Chief Justice, the court caught up with its docket to the extent of delivering opinions in all cases under submission, but was not clear of pending cases going on the docket for argument.

My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha Carr:

RECENTLY my girl friend and I went on a boat excursion. I met a very nice boy and we liked each other a lot. I introduced my girl friend to him and he fell for her. I have always been told that the boys like nice, quiet mannered girls. So I have always been nice and quiet. This other girl is noisy and loud, but she gets the fellows every time. She lied to this boy about her age, as he is several years older than we are. She sneaked out to go with him, and told her mother she was with me. Her mother found it out and am I in bad! Everyone says I'm cuter and better looking than she is, but she always has a lot of jokes to tell the fellows. Do you think that's why she's so popular? Shall I begin telling jokes and act loud and noisy too? How am I going to be popular if I stay refined and quiet?

JO.

Of course you could buy a whole bookful of jokes for a dime, thumb through it and memorize the most side-splitting ones—if any. Then next time you see a boy go into your act—and watch him run madly in the opposite direction! In other words, you can't be somebody else and get by with it. Just keep on being your refined little self; there are plenty of boys who like the quiet type. This doesn't mean, however, that you should just sit like a bump on a log. Learn how to talk amusingly and intelligently, and most of all learn how to get the boy to talk. When you have learned to be a good listener you will find you won't lack for boys to talk to you. Learn to be a good dancer also and you should be on your way. If the girl friend you mention uses your friendship to deceive her mother you should give her to understand you won't have any of that—or find a more honorable girl friend. My "Popularly Hint" and "Sub-Deb" leaflets will be a help to you, and if you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope I will mail them to you.

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM A GIRL of 12 and about to enter high school. My parents think this is wonderful and say I should appreciate what an honor it is to be admitted into high school so young. Well, maybe. But I know it's going to have its faults. When girls get into high school they begin to have dates. When they learn how young I am I am not going to be included. Shall I admit my age, or pretend to be 14 and make more friends? I am the youngest in my class.

DISGUSTED.

All the members of your class who go on into high school with you will already know your age, so you won't be able to keep it secret very long. Age 12 is much too young for this boy friend business, and I am quite sure that your mother wouldn't think much of the idea, either. Better just go on being a normal, sweet little girl until you catch up with the others and it is time for you to be attracted to boys and to date. No point to rushing matters. Be friendly with everyone and you won't lack for friends, no need to worry about that.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

IT IS curious how a sudden—and often unreasonable—twinge of hurt feelings can throw a really beautiful situation out of balance. Such an instance is described in this letter from a young stepmother:

"Is a stepmother always to remain an 'outsider' no matter how unselfish she is with her stepchildren? That is the way I sometimes feel. I have three stepchildren who prefer to live with their father and me to staying with their own mother who is married again and very well off, and with whom they could live if they wanted to. I do all my own work and we live very simply, but they seem very happy here. They call me by my first name as I am considerably younger than their father—in fact, I'm only 10 years older than the eldest. All went along smoothly until that special day on which they promptly forgot me. I mean on Mother's day—they remembered only their mother and so far as I was concerned, the day was just another one to them."

IN ANSWERING THIS I note that the date on your letter and that of its post mark is long past and therefore that you wrote it impulsively on the day you felt hurt. In any case I think it very evident that these children are devoted to you. Certainly they have proved it by wanting to live with you instead of with their own mother. The fact that they thought of her on Mother's day is a very understandable impulse, and, in my opinion, adds very much to their warm-heartedness and lovability which I hope you did not discourage! After all, SHE is their mother!

Bob Hope's Communique

SOMEWHERE in the air in the Pacific: It is amazing what our boys are doing in these outposts. Handicaps in fighting and means of living don't mean a thing to our guys. For instance, at Eniwetok the camp baker, a fella named Weber from Chicago, greeted us with a cake big enough to hold Crosby's birthday candles. And you should see the improvised washing machines they've fixed up—hand-made windmills that propel long sticks which swing around in an oil drum all day while the boys are flying over some of the other islands washing some of that other dirt over here. Can you imagine them doing their own washing?

Oh, well, I can make expenses some other way. One nice thing about these islands is the change of scenery—these boys tell me they never see the same lizard more than twice a day.

We did a matinee on one island for several thousand guys. The show went on at 3:45 p. m. Half of the audience had been sitting there since 7:30 a. m.—waiting for us. If isn't every U. S. O. show that they give a three-day pass for each laugh. Capt. Grant, the Navy skipper of this island, put a feed on for us that would make Mike Romanoff and Dave Chasen blush to the roots of their ration books. We opened with fresh turtle soup from a 300-pound turtle they caught in the ocean just off the dining room. After the turtle soup with sherry we laid our guns over filet mignon, green peas, salad, rice, then ice cream, cake, coffee—at which time I realized we must be winning the war.

Don't think the boys eat like that all the time—this is one of those places where if you want an egg they tell you to take a powder. They don't mind powdered egg, but they can't understand why they can't have Lana Turner or Dorothy Lamour in powder form, too. It's a thought.

Economical Menus for Tomorrow

By Meta Given

ONE important job the housewife has at present and will continue to have in the future is to plan meals so there will be no leftovers, and if there are leftovers to have an idea that will use them up quickly. Putting a half cup of one food and a third cup of another one in the refrigerator to stand until dried up and without any appetite appeal is sheer waste and unpardonable home management. This unfortunately happens in too many households all over the country, and it is the failure or the lack of ability to prevent waste that results in some families never being able to have the good things of life and others being able to have everything that makes life worthwhile and enjoyable. The following recipe utilizes dried crumbs made from dried bread, that too often is tossed into the garbage can, and even leftover cottage cheese.

Fried Tomato Sandwich.

Four medium tomatoes, one cup cottage cheese, one tablespoon finely chopped chives, or green onion tops, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two eggs, beaten, one tablespoon milk, one cup fine cracker crumbs, one-fourth cup margarine. Peel the tomatoes, slice each crosswise into four slices. Combine cottage cheese, chives and salt. Spread a spoonful of cottage cheese mixture on half the slices, top with remaining slices, sandwich fashion. Combine eggs and milk. Dip the tomato sandwiches into the egg mixture, then into the cracker crumbs. Fry in hot margarine until golden brown on both sides and hot through (about four minutes). Turn with wide spatula to avoid breaking sandwiches. Serve hot. Four servings.

MENUS FOR TUESDAY

Breakfast

Fresh stewed blue plums, one and one-half pounds; ready to eat cereal, four large servings; whole wheat toast, eight slices; home-made jam, cherry, raspberry, if available.

Luncheon

Fried tomato sandwiches, see recipe; corn on the cob, eight to twelve ears, cooked covered five to seven minutes; melba toast, toast thinly sliced bread in slow oven until brown and crisp all the way through; toast in the oven. Bread will keep several weeks, eight slices fresh chilled pears, four large.

Dinner

Braised short ribs, two pounds short ribs. Cut meat into serving sized portions and roll in one-half cup flour mixed with one teaspoon salt. Brown on all sides in three tablespoons of bacon drippings or hot shortening. Add one cup water or vegetable stock. Cover and simmer until tender, one and one-half to two hours. Thicken gravy if desired; browned potatoes, one and one-half pound potatoes. Peel and cook in pan with the meat during the last half hour of cooking. Turn to brown on all sides; Zucchini squash, wash tender young squash (four to six) and slice one-half inch thick. Slightly brown in margarine in skillet. Add one-half cup water and cover and simmer until tender, about five minutes, two large cucumbers, sliced. One large sweet onion, mix with seasonings, dressing. One-half hour before serving; hot rolls, eight bought; chilled butter-sauce pudding, mix one-fourth cup cornstarch, one-half teaspoon salt and three-fourths cup milk with sugar with one cup cold milk. Seal three cup milk in double boiler. Add cornstarch mixture, cook over direct heat until begins to boil, stir. Place over boiling water and cook five minutes. Stir in two tablespoons butter and one teaspoon vanilla. Chill; butter or fortified margarine used on all breads; include in today's menus milk to drink; six cups for children, 3 for adults.

Chicken Pie

One stewing chicken, three and one-half to four pounds; boiling water to cover, one onion, two stalks celery, two teaspoons salt, parsley, one cup cooked dried carrots, one cup cooked green peas, three tablespoons chicken fat (skimmed from stock), four tablespoons flour, one cup milk, two cups chicken stock, salt, and pepper.

Wash, clean and singe chicken. Place in boiling water with onion, celery, parsley and salt. Bring to the boiling point slowly and simmer gently about two and a half hours or until chicken is tender. When cool enough to handle, remove meat from the bones in large pieces. Blend the chicken fat with the flour, add milk, chicken stock salt and pepper. Cook in top of double boiler, stirring constantly, until thick. Place the chicken in a baking dish with the carrots and peas and cover with gravy. Arrange baking powder biscuits on top to form the crust of the chicken pie and bake at 450 degrees for 20 minutes. (If desired, the chicken pies may be baked in individual casseroles or baking dishes.)

Youngest Cave Guide in the Ozarks

Tommy Cosgrove, 16, Started Guiding at Fisher's Cave When He Was Only 8.

By Helen Clanton

TOMMY COSGROVE, who has just had his sixteenth birthday, has his career all cut out for him. He's going to study geology, specializing in the formation and history of caves. Tommy's been interested in caves for a long time. In fact, he has helped put himself through school by the money he earns as a guide in Meramec Caverns, at Staunton, Mo. Tommy says he believes that he is the youngest cave guide in the country—at least, he was when he started guiding, eight years ago.

Tommy's father died when he was 4, leaving Mrs. Cosgrove with three children. Bob, the older brother, got a job as a guide at the Fisher Caves in Meramec State Park, and Tommy sort of tagged along, because he liked to be around caves. He and Bob often went off by themselves in the hills to explore for caves, so Tommy felt he knew something about them. "Pretty soon," Tommy remembers, "Les Dill, one of the owners of Meramec Caverns, came to me and said he would pay me to put bumper strips on all the cars that came out of his cave, so I had a job of my own. But when the boss went home, I'd beg the older guides to let me go in the cave as a 'trailer' guide (one who mingles with the crowd and explains things to them when they can't hear the head guide). Then the boss said that I could be a guide, because I knew all about the cave and people liked to hear me talk."

DILL, who accompanied the boy on a recent trip to St. Louis, says Tommy is the most popular guide he's ever had. "I was dubious about starting such a kid out," he recalls, "but Tommy has always been bright, and he learned all about the cave in a hurry. People first asked him to go along to guide them through the cave as a novelty, then they discovered he knew more about it than lots of the older guides. He had a good voice, and he never got rattled, no matter how large the crowd was, nor how many questions he was asked."

"I was scared to death at first," Tommy confesses. "But I soon learned that the people who come through the cave with me were also sort of nervous. Once they got in, however, they are so interested that they feel all right. Nothing ever bothers me except crying babies, or older people who talk loud when I am trying to make everyone hear. Many times I have stopped right in the middle of my talk and told noisy people politely, but firmly, that I will escort them out of the cave right now if they aren't interested."

enough to keep quiet. But I've never had any trouble, because people are too anxious to get their money's worth."

Tommy, who is small for his age, actually looks much younger than his 16 years. He will be in the junior class at the Sullivan (Mo.) high school this year. He talks glibly, meets people with poise, and has an infectious smile. But it's difficult to imagine him using force to smelt a noisy visitor from the caverns.

"We always try to keep intoxicated people out of the cave, but I remember one time a man got by. He was at the back of a big crowd, and kept making funny remarks and kept everyone laughing. As we went through the cave, he would drop behind, and although I didn't know it, he unscrewed all the light bulbs as he went along. When we turned around to come out of the cave, everything was pitch black. I had to hurry ahead with my flashlight and fix the lights before I could escort the party out of the cave."

"Sometimes, when a party starts through the cave with Tommy," Dill, his boss, declares, "they ask me, 'Can this kid take us through?' When they come out, they apologize, because he did the job so well."

"Cave work is the most comfortable work you can get," Tommy affirms. "It's 60 degrees all year 'round. In the summer you don't worry about the heat—in the winter, you don't worry about the cold."

TOMMY sometimes makes as many as four trips a day through the cave, conducting visitors. He has had groups as large as 150, he says, and doesn't mind the large number one bit. Forty-five minutes is the average time for the trip, but Tommy, when he has time, and the visitors are sufficiently interested, can keep on talking for two hours.

"I'm studying science and public speaking in high school," Tommy says, "because I think they will help me with my work. I want to go to Iowa State University, because I hear they have a good course in geology. Then I want to visit caves all over the country and find out more about them."

Tommy starts out his spiel in the cavern something like this, he tells us, "This cavern was first discovered and used by the Indians, who thought that their god, Yucapago, lived here. First word of the cave reached the French explorer and fur trader, Jacques Renault, in 1735, in the pioneer settlement of Kaskaskia. Renault came to this district soon after, searching for furs, because he heard that the cavern was used as a storehouse for rare furs, which the Indians offered as sacrifices to Yucapago." Then he goes on to describe in detail what makes the stalactites and the stalagmites. "The visitors are generally surprised I can tell them so much about it," Tommy says.

Tommy's mother has never really approved of his working in caves, he says, and only once in the eight years he's been guiding has he persuaded her to go through with him. But that doesn't deter him from guiding through the summer, on week ends through the winter, and exploring the unopened regions of Meramec and other Ozark caverns just for fun. "Maybe," promises Tommy, "I'll discover something really important some day."

As I read it, I kept thinking that there are two kinds of soldiers—these young ones who have had to give their lives in military service, and the equally valiant ones like George Norris, who throughout their entire lives have fought for the right as they saw it. A civilian patriot is never as glamorous as a military one. Unless those who are now in uniform, however, keep up their fight when they come back on the home front, and take such men as George Norris as their model, they will never completely win the war. This time, some of us feel the war must be won in peace as well as on the battlefield.

Contract Bridge

By Ely Culbertson

THE most talked about hand in the finale of the recent Team of Fourth championship was the following:

West, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

♠ A J 4 3
♥ A 6 2
♦ K Q 7 5

♥ Q 10 9 8
♣ 10 8 3 2

♠ 8 4 3
♥ K 7 6 2
♦ Q 10 9 8
♣ A 9

In both rooms West opened with a shutout effort of three spades. Both Norths doubled, East passed, and in one room South also passed. The contract should have been defeated three tricks, but the defense slipped and only 300 points were collected.

In the other room South took out the optional double to four hearts. The post-mortem discussion here concerned only the play at four hearts. Actually, the declarer should have been defeated in his chosen plan, but again the defense went astray. The winning line was to win the opening spade lead, draw one or two rounds of trumps, then to lead the diamond queen or ten through West, making sure that the only diamond loser went to East. In this way declarer would have set up his fourth diamond upon which to discard dummy's spade jack, thus holding his losses to two trumps and one diamond.

It seems to me, however, that any great to-do over the play was almost irrelevant in view of the fact that South certainly should not have taken out the double of three spades. South had far better defensive than offensive values. True, North's double of one major suit might indicate excellent support for the other major, hearts, but there was no guarantee that North had four cards in the suit, and with South's anomalous heart holding, any lesser support from North figured to be catastrophic. In short, a bid by South was nothing but a shot in the dark, whereas the defeat of three spades could be reckoned a certainty.

"Muriel, what would you say to a nice big bowl of Wheaties, smothered in sliced bananas?"

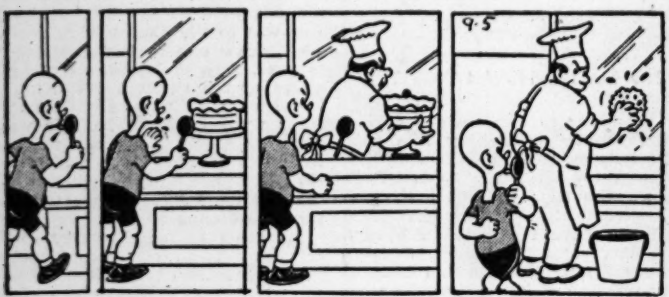

Muriel says, "Let's go." And who wouldn't when you're headed for a big bowl of milk, fruit, and Wheaties, "Breakfast of Champions." Good whole grain nourishment and keen "second helping" flavor in those crisp-toasted, malt-sweet flakes. Try Wheaties and see.
